

SEVEN SENTENCED
IN N. Y. LAND FRAUD

'Brains' of Scheme Given 3 to 6 Years.

NEW YORK, July 6.—(AP)—Prison sentences were meted out today to a woman and six men convicted of fleeing 1,600 immigrant factory workers in the $2,000,000 Slovak Manor land fraud.

Mrs. Ethel Smolens Goldner, 42, described by the prosecution as the "brains" of the scheme, was sentenced to three to six years in the state prison for women. The men were given sentences ranging from three to six years to indeterminate sentences in the penitentiary.

Originally, 39 persons and 12 corporations were indicted, and the trial, requiring 84 court sessions, was the longest in the 225-year history of general sessions court.

Victims of the conspiracy, including cripples, charwomen and low-paid factory workers, were induced to purchase lots near Babylon, Long Island, at prices ranging from $350 to $1,500 each, which the promoters had purchased for $2.60 to $10 each.

LEE CASE STUDIED
BY PAROLE GROUP

Convicted Slayer Slowly Dying for Lack of Operation, Attorney Declares.

A new clemency plea for J. D. Lee, serving a life term for murder of Benny Lichtenstein, was taken under advisement yesterday by the State Prison and Parole Commission after a 60-minute hearing in which Attorney Arthur Powell charged Lee is slowly dying for lack of an operation.

The name of J. E. Peek, whose mysteriously battered and beaten body was found recently in a deep railroad cut beside the strangled body of his bride of three months, figured briefly in the hearing.

Powell read evidence of Harry Kosnoffsky, which he said resulted in Lee's conviction, in which Kosnoffsky testified he could not remember hiding guns used to kill Lichtenstein under Peek's house, where they were found. Lee once lived at Peek's former home on Hope street.

The defense attorney charged that Lee could not have killed Lichtenstein, asserting that Kosnoffsky had given conflicting testimony which substantiated his stand. He introduced a letter from the prison physician at Tattnell, where Lee is imprisoned, describing Lee's condition.

Assistant Solicitor General J. Walter LeCraw opposed clemency for Lee, pointing out he had been found guilty by two separate juries and denied previous clemency pleas. Lee has served four years of his life term for the murder of Lichtenstein in 1931.

Monkey on Wheels Is a Beloved Mascot

Lena Is Widely-Traveled With Women's Overseas League.

Meet Lena Charlie—mascot of the Women's Overseas Service League and an unusual monkey with an unusual history.

Life began for Lena Charlie at the league's convention in Minneapolis in 1929. It was there that Miss Lena Hitchcock, of Washington, D. C., then serving as national president, appointed Miss Patricia Powell, of Milwaukee, as "national monkey shiner."

"I felt that humor must go hand in hand with service to make that service human and effective," said Miss Hitchcock. "So, as a symbol of the 'monkey shiner,' a toy monkey about a foot high was presented to Miss Hoole."

Origin of Name.

Miss Hoole promptly "christened" the monkey Lena Charlie, taking the first name of Miss Hitchcock and the first name of General Charles P. Summerall, one of the chiefs of staff with whom the women served in France and a respected and loved friend of the organization.

Since then, Lena Charlie, symbol of good comradeship and good humor, has had an interesting life. She has attended all conventions from the one in Minneapolis down to the present one here.

It was Paris, 1930; Philadelphia, 1931; Los Angeles, 1932; Pittsburgh, 1933; Detroit, 1934; Glacier Park, 1935; San Antonio, 1936, and Cleveland, 1937, for Lena Charlie, who blithely gathered gifts and decorations through the years.

Monkey on Wheels.

She wears a Mexican hat and a serape, presented in San Antonio; a tiny bale of cotton, presented in Atlanta; a tiny pair of roller skates, presented in Detroit; a tiny American flag, presented in Betsy Ross' home town, Philadelphia; moccasins, presented in Glacier Park.

A papoose, named "Sit 'Em Down," was also presented Lena Charlie in Glacier Park. But the "child" was kidnapped during the Cleveland convention, a mystery still unsolved.

Lena also wears a tiny Croix de Guerre, a medal of the American Legion national convention in Portland, Ore., in 1932, and the pin of the League.

"I've had a lot of fun with Lena, and I think she's had a lot of fun with me," said Miss Hoole.

At Home Here, Too.

Last summer Lena traveled from Miss Hoole's home in Milwaukee to the Atlanta home of Mrs. John T. Toler, who kept her in custody until the convention opened Sunday.

Miss Hoole, who wears a tiny silver pin emblematic of her position as "national monkey shiner," was born in Massachusetts. During the World War, she served in Paris with the Red Cross, at Canteen No. 9. Her first directress was Miss Rosalie Howell, of Atlanta, who was succeeded by another Atlantan, Mrs. Lollie M. Pickett.

She is principal of Theodore Roosevelt school, West Allie, Wis., an institution with 400 students.

RESCUE WORKERS SAVE MAN TRAPPED IN MINE

AMEAGLE, W. Va., July 6.—(AP) Rescue workers, spurred on by the cries of a trapped comrade, brought him out from beneath a slate fall today and went back again for another miner they feared was dead.

George Nesses, 59, shouting through a wall of coal and slate, directed fellow workers to the spot where he was pinned to the earth. Nesses was taken to a hospital for treatment of severe injuries.

Farther back in the American Eagle Collieries Company mine the workers expected to find Clyde Compton, 30. They had heard nothing from him since the big pile of slate fell at 11 a. m.

Boy Found After 3 Days 'Wishes I Had a Fishpole'

ANACONDA, Mont., July 6. (AP)—Searchers reported today they found Robert Russell, 13, missing since Monday in the wild Anacona-Pintlar region, and declared he greeted them with, "I wish I had a fishpole." The searchers said he was unharmed. He was found 10 miles from the point where he became separated from his step-father, Charles Tucker, while on a fishing trip.

"Welcome, delegates!" says Lena Charlie, the monkey mascot of the Women's Overseas Service League, who has attended every national convention since 1929. Lena poses with Miss Lena Hitchcock, past national president, and originator of the idea of a symbol for good comradeship and good humor.

GEORGE, GOVERNOR
BACK F. D. R. CALL

Unfair Rail Rates Cited as Two Urge Study To Enrich South.

Senator George and Governor Rivers, candidates for renomination in Democratic primaries in September, voiced approval yesterday of President Roosevelt's letter to a conference of southern leaders suggesting a study of the south's economic problems.

Reached at his Vienna home, Senator George said: "I welcome and will support any program lifting the purchasing power of the south as well as the national income."

"What the south needs," he added, "is fair and just treatment along with other sections of the country. Both the tariff and territorial freight rates in force in the United States operate against southern industry."

Governor Rivers said the federal government "could solve quickly two of the south's major economic problems by establishing freight rate differentials and a stabilization fund for nationwide equalization of governmental services and costs."

He explained an equalization fund, "to operate on a nationwide basis with federal funds under state administration, would establish much greater economic parity between the relatively wealthy and relatively poor sections of the nation."

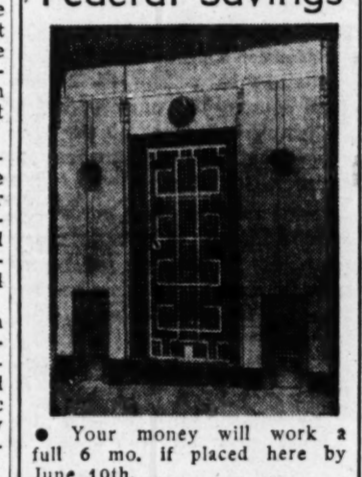

At his home in Winder, Senator Richard Russell Jr. declined immediate comment, explaining he wished to study the proposals first.

State Liquor Raids
Net 8,251 Gallons

Eight thousand, two hundred and fifty-one gallons of non-tax-paid whisky were confiscated in Georgia last month by officers of the alcohol tax unit, according to the June report issued yesterday. This shows an increase of 4,677 gallons as compared with seizures in May.

The report also showed the seizure and destruction of 108,740 gallons of mash, an increase of 3,890 gallons as compared with the previous month. Officers raided 131 stills during June, the report shows, and arrested 224 persons, 27 more than in May. Forty automobiles and trucks also were confiscated by the officers.

The Hon. Uncle Joe Burgin Retires To Lobby for His Home Rule Bill

Veteran Lawmaker Thinks He Can Do More From Outside.

By L. A. FARRELL.

Having failed during six terms as a member of the house and senate to bring about enactment of his famous home rule bill, the Honorable Joseph S. (Home Rule) Burgin yesterday announced his retirement from the general assembly to devote his entire time to "lobbying" his pet bill.

Uncle Joe said he had four remaining interests in life, his family, the home rule bill, his pet dilly collars and his cigars. In becoming a lobbyist he said that although his primary interest would be in the home rule bill he would swing into action in the event any legislation affecting family, dilly collars or his cigars reached the legislature.

"I have never understood why my bill never could get through both houses during the same session," Uncle Joe opined. "Every time I was serving in the house I got the house to pass it only to have it killed in the senate. If I was serving in the senate, the bill would get by the senate but would die aborning in the house. During the next session I'm going to try my hand as a lobbyist and try to get it through both houses."

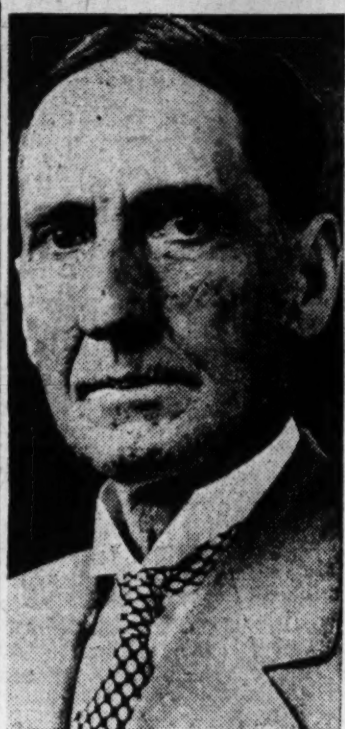

Senator Burgin made it clear that he was not open for any other lobbying activities.

"As I see it, I will have my hands full with the one bill," he said. He added he would buy his own expenses to and from Buena Vista, Marion county, and that the biennial Burgin dinner, always a feature of legislative sessions, would be held with all the pomp, ceremony and birds as heretofore.

The Burgin bill has become almost a legend at the capitol. It actually is a constitutional amendment which gives the legislature the right to set up some form of home rule for the county governments and would eliminate local legislation from the assembly. Heretofore legislators have been reluctant to pass up the power they wield over their home counties and have failed to put Uncle Joe's bill through.

Uncle Joe was brimming with confidence as he discussed his bill yesterday.

"You know so many folks have

JOSEPH BURGIN.

been kidded into the belief that the home rule bill can never become a law," he said. "Just the direct opposite is the truth. It will pass if I live long enough and I feel like a man of 35."

He talks and looks like a boy of 20.

F. D. R. POPULARITY IN OHIO AT LOW EBB

Down Sharply Since 1936; Spending Program Found Factor by Survey.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP, Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, July 7.—As President Roosevelt starts his swing to the west tomorrow, how popular will he find himself in the states through which he travels? Will the voters be as enthusiastically for him now as they were in 1936? He makes his first stop in Ohio, to deliver a speech at Marietta tomorrow. If his henchmen, discounting the cheering crowds along the route, were to canvass the voters of Ohio in their homes, as the Institute has done, they would find the President's popularity down sharply since 1936, with only a bare majority of voters for him today.

Key State. Ohio, an important key state with 24 seats in congress, has had wide swings of political sentiment in recent years. Roosevelt carried the state by only 51 per cent in 1932, but rolled up a lead of 61 per cent against Landon in 1936. Today, Institute surveys find the pendulum in Ohio swinging away from the President. When asked "Are you for or against Roosevelt today?" voters throughout Ohio divide as follows:

For Roosevelt 51%
Against Roosevelt 49%

This represents a 10-point drop in his popularity in the two-year period since 1936. Will the President's personal appearance in Ohio once again rally the voters of this important state to the New Deal cause? The question is vital today with congressional elections looming ahead, and with the New Deal wing of the party anxious to control as many state delegations as possible in the 1940 nominating convention.

Spending Disapproved. Why has the President lost ground in Ohio? A special analysis of the opinions of voters who have turned against him indicate that his spending program is one of the chief reasons. Many voters who have turned against him name other policies, such as his attitude toward business, but the greatest number express the general sentiment "he's spending too much, and we'll have to foot the bill."

At 55 He Had Earned $130,000—but Now He's THE MAN NOBODY WANTS

You may have seen such men come into your own office—timid from being turned down so often. If you knew their life stories, you'd discover something worth thinking about. For many of these men made a lot of money, as much as $130,000, or more, by the time they are 55, at an average income.

Yet how many have anything left to show for it? Worth thinking about— isn't it? You hope to make a lot of money before you're 55. Will you lose it—spend it—become THE MAN NOBODY WANTS?

Why not make certain, instead, that you'll have at least $100 a month when you're 55 or 60, with a Northwestern Mutual Retirement plan. For information without obligation.

Author, Photographer "Rediscover" South

"Atlanta looks good to us," was the joint statement yesterday of Jonathan Daniels (left), editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, and Alfred Eisenstaedt, well-known photographer. Daniels' new book, "A Southerner Discovers the South," is to be published next week and Eisenstaedt plans to use it as a guide for a series of southern pictures.

plantation; he traveled not only through the cities and towns but from tobacco to tenant farmer; TVA to pellagra; old women in big empty houses to crowded tenement families in Birmingham and Atlanta.

He found views as different as Beale street, in Memphis, and Paces Ferry and Peachtree road, in Atlanta; life as different as the high aristocracy of "So Red the Rose" and "Tobacco Road." All these helped to make him discover the real south. Of "Tobacco Road" he said:

"Why Georgians become upset over the presentation of this play is more than I can see. It is simply a name, but what it depicts exists everywhere in the country. It is no more of Georgia than any other state."

"I have not written a hymn of praise nor an apology of the south. I have written of the south as I have been told me by governors and professors, labor leaders and industrialists and up-lifters. They told me solemn things, true things, maybe, but I also talked with hitch-hikers and tenant farmers, hillbillies and delta planters, poets and bartenders."

The book is being published by the MacMillan Company.

MEXICAN OFFICIALS SIGN OIL CONTRACT

New York Company Will Buy $10,000,000 Worth.

MEXICO CITY, July 6.—(AP)—The Mexican government has contracted to sell $10,000,000 worth of oil to Davis and Company, of New York, in a deal described tonight as a broad step toward solution of the nation's problem of disposing of her vast stores of black gold.

About 50 per cent of the oil will go to Germany and the rest to general European markets, principally those of Scandinavian countries, reliable official and unofficial sources disclosed tonight.

The deal was reported by these sources to have been consummated yesterday. It was approved by President Lazaro Cardenas some weeks ago.

The oil will be obtained from wells expropriated on March 18 from 17 British and American companies and from wells owned by the government prior to talking over the foreign-owned companies.

HUGHES MAY TAKE OFF FOR PARIS SATURDAY

NEW YORK, July 6.—(AP)—Associates of Howard Hughes, millionaire flyer and one-time Hollywood movie producer, said tonight he and a crew of four would take off from Floyd Bennett airport "probably on Saturday" for a flight to Paris.

The trip may be the start of a "round-the-world" flight, long planned by the inventor of a fortune established in the oil well tool business in Texas.

Constipated? You Should Get at the Cause!

Lots of people think they can't be "regular" without frequent trips to the medicine chest. "I just dose up and get it over," they tell you. But doctors know they don't "get it over" at all—until they get at the cause of the trouble! Chances are it's simple to find the cause if you eat only what most people do—meat, bread, potatoes. It's likely you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If that fits you, your ticket is a crunchy breakfast cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran. It contains the "bulk" you need plus the great intestinal tonic, vitamin B. Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and just watch the old world grow brighter! Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

temporary safety that a compromise might offer. We are fighting for our existence. We cannot stop midway to seek peace. If we should do so prior to the attainment of the object for which we are putting up resistance, it will mean the subjugation of our nation and annihilation of our race.

Never in history has any nation worthy of the name survived without sacrifice, or enjoyed peace without a struggle. It is to survive as a nation and to guarantee peace for our people and the generations of Chinese which are to come that we are struggling and will continue to struggle.

We have lost cities, but the foundation, the hope of our prolonged resistance is not to be found in metropolitan centers, but in the country, in the villages and in the determination to resist which millenniums of living close to the earth have engendered in our people.

We have lost territory, but we have lost it fighting, and by so doing have made us brighter; the spiritual flame which is the spirit of China, the spirit which will emerge from the ruins Japan has created to erect the structure of a new China.

Quarters cramped. The committee agreed that the present quarters are cramped and more room would be provided for white men prisoners. If the men and women should be placed in separate buildings, a new dormitory would be needed, it was said.

Both conditions of prison conditions have been going on for several weeks following Mayor Hartsfield's charge that the stockade was "an ungodly mess." The committee, which was appointed by Mayor Pro Tem Robert Carpenter, has heard testimony from numerous witnesses and has made an extensive study of the prison administration.

Thieves Steal Siren From Policemen's Auto

Faces of two county policemen were on the crimson side last night.

Returning to their car which had been parked in the rear of the courthouse, they found that enterprising thieves had "lifted" their siren, valued at about $35.

Both continued their duties for the rest of their allotted time, hoping against hope that nothing would happen which would make a noise-maker necessary. All was quiet at last reports.

judgment decreeing the following: (a) That the attempted removal by the President of the United States of the wholly invalid, void and of no effect whatsoever. (b) That the attempted designation by the President . . . of Harcourt A. Morgan as chairman of the board of directors of the defendant (TVA) . . . was and is wholly invalid, void and without authority in law. (c) That the complainant is and since his appointment on May 30, 1933, has been and still is a member and chairman of the board of directors . . . and entitled to the emoluments ($10,000 per year) of a member. (d) That the defendants, Harcourt A. Morgan and David E. Lilienthal, as directors of the . . . Tennessee Valley Authority be ordered to recognize the complainant as a member and chairman of the board.

Letters Attached to Bill. Attorneys here explained the suit was not filed in federal court because the amount of money involved was less than $3,000. They said the United States court of appeals at Cincinnati had held the TVA could be sued as a corporation wherever it has its general offices, which are now located here.

The suit was filed through the firm of Ayres, Broughton & Parkey, of Knoxville, and Cassels, Potter & Bentley, of Chicago, Ill. Attached to the bill were copies of letters which Dr. Morgan received from and sent to President Roosevelt and Directors H. A. Morgan and Lilienthal.

Charges Evacuation Ordered. In one charged H. A. Morgan had "taken possession" of his office and had ordered his staff to vacate "within one-half hour." President Roosevelt notified Dr. Morgan in a letter dated March 22 that he was removing him as TVA

(c) Refusing to submit to the demand of the chief executive for the facts upon which you relied in openly making grave and libelous charges of dishonesty and want of integrity against your fellow directors and refusing to respond to questions of the chief executive relating to charges of obstruction made against you by your fellow directors."

Dr. Morgan refused to discuss the charges with the President but later appeared before the TVA investigating committee to outline his accusations.

H. A. Morgan and Lilienthal denied the accusations and charged their chairman had attempted to

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT WITHHOLDS COMMENT

WASHINGTON, July 6.—(AP)—The Justice Department withheld comment tonight on Dr. Arthur E. Morgan's suit challenging the right of President Roosevelt to remove him from the chairmanship of TVA.

It was a foregone conclusion, however, the government would contest the suit.

Before the President removed Dr. Morgan, he asked the Justice Department whether the suit was within his power.

Robert H. Jackson, now solicitor general, but then acting attorney general, advised "there would appear to be no question that the power of removal is in fact vested in the President."

Harcourt A. Morgan and David Lilienthal, TVA directors named defendants in the suit, also declined to discuss Dr. Morgan's step.

OBSERVER PREDICTS FAIR SKIES TODAY

Rain Needed by Some Crops, Weatherman Says in Summary.

Atlanta may continue to enjoy fair weather today with a moderate rise in temperatures, the weather bureau announced yesterday.

While the mercury failed to reach the anticipated 80 degrees yesterday, extremes ranged from 72 to 87 degrees. Today's averages are expected to range from a low of 70 degrees to a high of 88 degrees.

While weather for crops is considered generally favorable, George W. Mindling, meteorologist, said yesterday that a need for rain was reported from some central counties, especially to the south of Augusta and southwest of Griffin. This condition is especially applicable to cotton-growers, he said.

Some progress has been made by planters to check the spread of weevils. Bolls are now plentiful in the southern half of the state and some blooms have appeared northward beyond Atlanta, Mindling reported.

Corn, sweet potatoes, tobacco and sugar cane crops are reported to be in good condition, although a majority of the sections in which they are grown are in need of rain. Regarding truck crops, the bureau reported that large shipments of watermelons are being made, and that tomatoes, cabbages, squash, peas and okra are plentiful, but that rain would be helpful. With the peach season over in the south portion of the state, it was reported that Elbertas and other late varieties are now moving north of Macon.

I. C. C. WILL RESUME RAIL RATE HEARING

Graves Will Head Southern Delegation to Buffalo To Demand Parity.

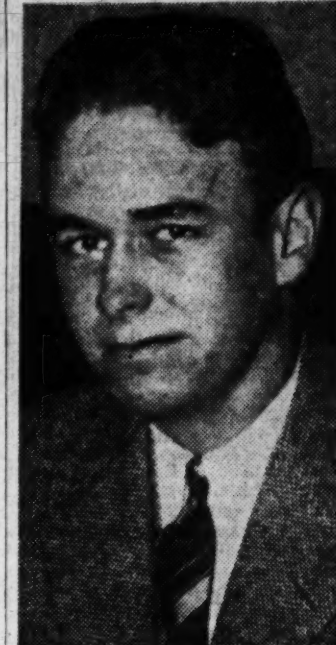

A large delegation from the southern states, headed by Governor Bibb Graves, of Alabama, and Chairman Walter McDonald, of the Georgia Public Service Commission, will leave today for Buffalo to appear before the Interstate Commerce Commission in behalf of the south's demand for railroad rate parity.

The I. C. C. will resume its hearings on the south's petition at Buffalo next Monday. The hearing was adjourned to Buffalo to give northern states an opportunity to answer testimony submitted by the south at Birmingham several months ago.

McDonald is chairman of the southern rate conference and he has called a meeting of representatives of all states for the State hotel in Buffalo next Sunday. "Since the hearing was adjourned at Birmingham we have been working hard gathering evidence to submit in rebuttal to testimony to come from northern states," Chairman McDonald said yesterday. "We believe we will place a good case before the commission and are hoping for a favorable verdict."

Edgar Watkins Sr., Atlanta lawyer, and chief counsel for the southern states, will be in charge of presentation of the evidence. The south is seeking to eliminate a 27 per cent railroad rate differential now assessed in this section over that which is levied against northern shippers.

Atlantan at Annapolis

Fort E. Land, son of Mrs. Sue Barrow Land and the late Fort E. Land, former state school superintendent, left Atlanta yesterday morning for Annapolis, where he will enter the United States Naval Academy. Land was appointed to the Naval Academy last spring by Senator Richard B. Russell while a special student at the Georgia School of Technology. A native of Macon, he received his preparatory education in this city, attending O'Keefe and Boys' High, later finishing at the Georgia Military College, Milledgeville, and the Marion Military Institute, Marion, Alabama.

GOVERNOR ORDERS BUREAUS TO SAVE

Departments Receiving Funds Specifically Allocated Are Unaffected.

State departments operating on money from the general fund were ordered yesterday by Governor Rivers to plan their expenditures for the next three months on the basis of 70 per cent of their legislative appropriations.

The general fund appropriations for the 1938-39 fiscal year, which began July 1, total approximately $26,000,000. Departments which receive specifically allocated funds, such as the highway and agricultural departments, were not affected. Last year they operated on a basis of 74 per cent of their appropriations. Governor Rivers said there was a surplus at the end of the year.

"We are feeling our way along during the first quarter of this fiscal year," the Governor said. "Income for this period is necessarily problematical and we want to know where the money is coming from before we spend it."

Rivers said the 70 per cent would be net to the departments, following deduction of the 10 per cent for the stabilization fund and 3 per cent for the general treasury fund as provided by law.

Decision for the percentage of operation was made by the budget commission, composed by the Governor and State Auditor Zach Arnold.

The Governor said teachers' salaries would again be paid 100 per cent, as they were last year, for the seven-month term.

Auditor Arnold said it might be possible to raise the operating percentage later in the year, if revenues from income tax, liquor, and other sources showed a steady increase. Arnold is now compiling a report for the fiscal year, just ended.

FREDERICK HANSON RITES TO BE HELD

Burial Will Take Place in Annapolis Today.

DIXIE HOLC HEADS MEET HERE FRIDAY

State managers of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation will meet in Atlanta tomorrow and Saturday, H. E. Cox, southeastern regional director, announced yesterday. The meeting will be held at regional headquarters, 114 Marietta street, and states represented will be Georgia, Florida, Alabama, North Carolina and South Carolina.

The southeastern region has exceeded its sales quotas for June, the regional director said, while four of the states have exceeded their annual quotas.

Frank A. Holden, Georgia HOLC manager, said the state organization acquired 1,214 homes and resold 284 homes between June 28 and July 5. Of the number of homes acquired, 736 have been rented, the state manager said, while 99 vacancies now on hand are being repaired and put in shape for renting or sale.

HAPEVILLE TO BUILD LAKE WITH WPA AID

Other Projects Contemplated by Council as Part of Recovery Drive.

In line with the Works Progress Administration program to get people back to work, the Hapeville city council has purchased five acres of land adjoining the 35-acre city park on which it will build a lake. The work will be done by WPA labor.

Council also is considering inauguration of a survey of city streets with a view to improvements. Several miles of unpaved streets are included in the corporate limits of the city, and, with the completion of the survey, resurfacing and paving of these thoroughfares is expected to be carried out by WPA.

Erection of a combination city hall, public auditorium, fire and police station also is being contemplated. It is estimated the work would cost $2,000.

FORGER IS GIVEN PROBATION TERM

Two-Year Sentence Imposed on W. D. Clackum.

Wesley D. Clackum, indicted last week by a federal grand jury on a charge of forgery and circulating forged checks, was given a two-year probationary sentence by Judge E. Marvin Underwood yesterday in United States district court.

Clackum was arrested June 29 by the United States Secret Service for stealing two government checks from a Capitol avenue address.

Rena Goss, found guilty of violating the internal revenue laws by transporting illicit liquor, was sentenced to a year and a day in the penitentiary.

ATLANTA, GA., JULY 7, 1938.

IS THIS SIGNIFICANT?

There has been, of late, a gratifying awakening of new interest in the south on the part of the national administration. The south has, of recent days, sought to hide with inherent courtesy an attitude of surprise and bewilderment at the new concern for the economic well-being of this section. For it is something so new and strange for other sections of the country to view southern problems with a desire, at least, to be constructive. Hitherto the attitude has largely been confined to that of pure—or, perhaps, not so pure—criticism.

Newspaper headlines have told the story of millions of government funds poured into the south for all sorts and varieties of material improvements. In Georgia alone, while accurate figures are not available, at least sixty or seventy millions have been allotted to varied projects within the past few weeks. In Kentucky even larger sums are being spent and the same story, in greater or lesser degree, is told in other southern states.

President Roosevelt has called a conference, now in session, of southern leaders from many walks in life, to hear reports of federal investigations as to conditions in the south and to advise as to the wisest course to pursue to cure the social and financial evils of this section.

In his letter to that conference the President said there is an economic unbalance in the entire nation caused by conditions in the south. "It is my conviction," he wrote, "that the south presents right now the nation's No. 1 economic problem." He then proceeds to assert that this "economic unbalance" must be righted, "for the sake of the south and of the nation."

For three quarters of a century the south has occupied the status of a colony, in her relationship with the rest of the nation. The south has been an area for exploitation, out of which great fortunes have been piled up in the north and east. Industrial prosperity has been built, in the north, largely because the south has been held to the role of agricultural producer and supplier of raw material.

Methods pursued to attain this condition are too well known to require lengthy recapitulation here. The high tariff policy is probably the keystone of the arch of oppression. It has forced the southern farmer to pay tribute, through everything he buys as well as through the prices he has received for his own products, to the industrial east.

Another heavy factor against southern progress has been the inequity of railroad freight rates, which arbitrarily exact a greater cost for transportation of the southern manufacturer's products to market, than for the goods of his northern competitor.

Capital investments in the south have been made preponderantly by northern investors, thus exacting another dividend out of southern natural wealth for the bank accounts of the north. Southern capital itself has contributed to this evil, by passing through the hands of northern investment groups before returning to the south.

Thus impoverished, the south has, perforce, lagged behind the rest of the country in living conditions for many of its people. Educational opportunities in the south have, until comparatively recent years, been far less than those of the north. In other respects, the human factor has performed, suffered. Thus the evil circle, begun in unfair economic handicaps, has rounded out through all the cycle of human deprivation.

At the inception of the New Deal the south had hopes that, at last, a Democratic administration, backed by the greatest majority ever enjoyed by the party in power, would do something to rectify the long imposed injustices to the south. In large measure, however, these hopes have, until recent date, met with disappointment.

Nothing has been done to lift the burden of tariff injustice, save through the trade treaties with other nations secured by Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

The inequitable freight rate situation still continues, though hearings are now being held by the Interstate Commerce Commission with the hope that this tax on southern industry may be ended.

The New Deal, during the period from March 4, 1933, to December 31, 1937, spent on relief and recovery, including all types of expenditure, a total of $32,000,000,000. Analyzed by states, it is revealed that of this sum, the western states received by far the highest amount per capita, while the southern states, on the same per capita basis, are at, or near, the foot of the list.

In 1937 the Works Progress Administration spent, in the entire 11 states of the "solid south," $210,000,000. The population of these 11 states is 28,761,000. Yet in Pennsylvania, with less than one-third this population—9,000,000—the WPA spent, in 1937, $214,000,000, more than in the entire south.

The federal government itself, through the WPA, maintained a southern wage scale far lower than what it paid in the north and west. Recently that difference was, in large part, wiped out by an increase in the minimum monthly WPA pay for labor in the southern states.

It has been contended, for many years, that the political curse of the south is its adherence to one party. There are, of course, good reasons for this. But it has been argued that, so long as federal administrations know the south will vote Democratic, under any circumstances, those administrations will not be inclined to spend heavily in this section. Politically speaking, it is a waste of funds to send money into constituencies either hopelessly lost or positively won.

Now, however, there is a new political division looming in the nation. It is a division not along the old party lines, but rather an intraparty split, between "liberals" and "conservatives." President Roosevelt himself recognized this new alignment when he said, in his most recent fireside chat that he, as leader of the Democratic party, had the right to lend a hand for the nomination of "liberals" as against "conservative" opponents.

Thus the south, at last, becomes a battleground for an issue national in scope. It is still staunchly Democratic, but the administration is no longer indifferent to the outcome of Democratic primaries in the south.

It may, perhaps, be coincidence. But whether by chance or by design, the fact remains that, at last, the south is enjoying the benefit of a new interest on the part of the nation. That the awakening comes at a time when national political issues are at stake in the south may not be significant. Or it may point a silent lesson for the south to heed and to remember.

ANOTHER STUNT FLIGHT

Another spectacular flight across the Atlantic looms, with Howard Hughes poised to take off for Paris as soon as weather conditions are propitious. But a few years ago this would have been something for the country to get in a dither about. Today, it is but another hop. Dangerous, yes, but if the man wants to take the chance, it is his business.

Aviation has progressed to the stage, in this country, where it has provided mammoth planes to which the over-water hop to the continent means little when accompanied by the aids to flying provided in regular service. The only thing delaying establishment of the service is the provision by Great Britain of flying boats capable of making the trans-Atlantic voyage with a pay load. Because international laws make it impossible for Pan-American Airways to own foreign bases, it became necessary to make an agreement with Imperial Airways for joint operation of the route. America was ready, but must delay until Britain is prepared.

The feasibility of the service, despite varying conditions, has been proved by Pan-American's Pacific services and by its over-water service throughout South America.

Hughes, on the other hand, is making a one-man stab at a flight already pioneered by many others. Probably he will make the trip safely, but the flight must be considered in the same nature that stunt flying has been regarded during the last few years. It accomplishes little, yet gives all aviation a black eye when accompanied by tragedy.

It must be hoped that with the establishment of the regular air service to Europe, these sensational lone flights will be placed in the same category that stunt flying now occupies. Aviation is no longer a plaything, to be jeopardized by the reckless who create sensations far beyond the value of their deeds.

There are rewards now, as ever, for the undaunted. A piano salesman, flying into Chicago, sold a piano to the plane stewardess—and with no demonstrator.

A little moderation, boys, in bombing British shipping, says Il Duce to the Spaniards. A moderately bombed ship now and then would be ample, he thinks.

A Canadian finds stock worth $180,000 in a trunk. This is improvement. In the good old bad days, a freight house full would have been worth less.

Editorial of the Day

PACKING MEAT IN COTTON

(From The Spartanburg Herald)

A Chicago packer announces an improved method for the shipping and marketing of meats which is said to be the most revolutionary since refrigerated cars came into general use. The process consists of the marketing of cuts and quality of meat and packing carcasses in cotton cloths protected by an outer covering of waxed paper. It is said that the freshness and flavor of the meat is preserved by the new method which is now in its second year.

According to the announcement, the firm used 8,000,000 yards of cotton cloth in 1937 and expects an increase to 20,000,000 yards, about 7,500,000 pounds. To manufacture that amount of cloth would require 15,000 bales of cotton.

This is a new use for cotton from an unexpected source. Many laboratories in the United States are experimenting upon new uses for cotton and the Cotton Textile Institute has made that one of its major activities.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

NEW DEAL INNER CIRCLE WASHINGTON, July 6.—The oddest feature of the New Deal is the fact that the highest officials of the government have so little influence on the government's broad policies. These are formed at the White House by the President and his private advisers. And if the cabinet members and congressional leaders don't like them, they can jump them.

Naturally, policy is discussed at cabinet meetings, but it has often been settled on first. There have even been times when unhappy cabinet members learned of important steps by reading of them in the newspapers. As for the congressional bigwigs, House Leader Sam Rayburn had to make a mild scene before the President consented to the Monday morning conferences, at which he gives his orders for the week on the Hill. Until the arrangement of the conferences, the leaders got their orders sometimes by telephone, and quite as often in messages carried by members of the White House inner circle.

There are several reasons for this situation—the chief ones being that the present high officials of the government, almost without exception, are either hopeless hacks, or conservatives at heart, or men whose opinions the President only values in their special fields. Far more interesting, however, is the situation's effect on the New Deal.

PATTERN OF CONSERVATISM A department with outright Commerce, the President is content to let go quietly to sea. His ablest official first lieutenants he really values, and frequently sees. There have even been times when these men replaced the members of the inner circle as policy-makers. One was this winter, when the President listened to the budget-balancing counsels of Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr. and Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the RFC. The private advisers, spenders to be last man, nagged the President to much that for a month or so they were positively exiled. But in the end the President returned to his spending policy, the old faces reappeared at the White House, and Morgenthau and Jones relapsed into their former niches.

While he drives his congressional leaders unmercifully, the President is content to let his better executive subordinates do their own work under his supervision. Morgenthau at the Treasury; Jones in his domain; Cordell Hull at the State Department; Henry Wallace at Agriculture; Marriner S. Eccles at the Federal Reserve Board—all of these and a host of minor agencies are reasonably independent. There are gradations. For example, the President is almost as much secretary of the treasury as Henry Morgenthau, but they have a friendly partnership. Wallace is almost completely independent. While Eccles, an economic mystic, might almost share the general policy-making functions of his allies in the inner circle, if he were not such a one-man man. These are details, however. The important thing is that, since these men in the cabinet, at the agencies and in congress, are virtually excluded from policy-making, they have little interest in and feel no responsibility for the general policy of the government. Toward the members of the White House inner circle, who do make policy, they feel a marked hostility.

CHANCE OF OPEN WAR This feeling of exclusion from policy-making has an even more significant result among the organization Democrats. The chief of these is Postmaster General James A. Farley, to whom the President has always delegated the details of political management. As Big Jim is the only man in the administration who knows the boys in the precincts and the leaders in the wards, he is also the only man with a political power independent of the President's.

And while Big Jim is a loyal fellow, retaining his affection for the President himself, he unquestionably feels that interlopers have stolen his beloved Democratic party away from him. He and the other organization Democrats view the doings of the President's advisers with an irritable suspicion. They are viewed in their turn with a suspicion still more pronounced. And now that the President is preparing to make war on recalcitrant local organizations of his party, the situation is really growing strained. Thus there is a chance of open war.

LIVING ON THE FRINGE Except for the President, the official leaders of the Democratic party are all either outliers, or, like Senate Leader Alben W. Barkley, somewhat muddled yes-men. And that, in turn, affects the position of the President and his inner circle of advisers. Several of these last are not born Democrats. All of them, and the President as well, are New Dealers rather than Democrats now.

Thus it is that the most eminent Democrats' potential future influence on the New Deal is probably nil. As things stand now, these outliers can only assert themselves in opposition to the President and to the New Deal.

To Help

You Feel Cool.

Georgia's summer sunshine having been getting in some delightful curative heat the past few days, it occurred that story lines of winter time in Canada might prove suggestively cooling. Not that this column has any complaint to make about the heat. Quite the contrary. We think it fine. In fact, heat is our dish right up to—or nearly up to—the prostration point.

But some people do complain about high temperatures in the southern summer time. So, for their sakes, we'll lay the scene of our story today in Ontario on a very cold and snowy January day.

Butterfat

Production.

At the time your column conductor was employed to make butterfat production tests of Holstein cows, he found the official records. Job was to go, when called, to the farm of a breeder of these fine animals and witness every milking of the cow undergoing the test, sample the milk, keep said samples under lock and key, and send them to a Babcock tester for fat content and thus be able to testify, under oath if required, as to the amount of butterfat said cow had produced in seven days, 14 days or 30 days, according to the length of the test.

It was pleasant work, but confining. For I had to stay right on the farm until the test was completed. Then, generally, there was some other Holstein fancier with another cow to be tested. They were always in a tremendous hurry and it meant a fast trip by train or cut to the next farm and another period of isolation.

On this particular occasion had been more than 30 days on one farm, in midwinter. Nothing to do except sit in the house between milkings and tests and talk or read or something. Then came the call to hurry to another place, a farm some six miles from the railroad. Nearest station name of Mountain View, on main line between Montreal and Ottawa. I was supposed to get the train headed for Ottawa on a Friday and get off at Mountain View.

But I was hungry for the city fleshpots. So played hockey for one night. Went on to Ottawa, had a good dinner, saw a show and retired for the night in the best hotel there.

And woke up next morning to find everything deep under a fresh fall of snow. No cabs, no street cars, nothing stirring. And there was I, a truant from the job, supposed to be at Mountain View.

I slogged through the snow to the railroad depot and called the crew to let me ride with the locomotive going out to push a snow plow. The snow plow would have it, that outfit got to Mountain View. And no further. The snow plow stuck in a snow filled cut just past the little town.

A Dry

Village.

Now Mountain View had recently voted dry under the local option law. And all the business had gone to the next town, which was wet. And all the citizens of Mountain View were sore and disgruntled. Especially the hotel proprietor, who also operated the only lively stable in the place.

He refused flatly to rent me a horse and cutter for the six-mile trip I had yet to make to that Holstein farm. He likewise refused to let me have a taxi and a bare existence point. And I sat from Saturday to Tuesday, wrapped in a fur coat, hunched over an almost cold radiator, shivering.

Tuesday, he was still adamant about his horses. So I borrowed a pair of snow shoes and tramped the six miles over the snow. Got a touch of frost bite at the back of the head, in that open space between the top of the coat collar and the bottom of the cap. And the six miles seemed like 20. But made it. And made the test, and no one ever complained about my delayed arrival.

But, gosh, that six miles on snow shoes was the coldest and hardest and most desperate undertaking—carrying a case with the Babcock tester slung over my shoulder and the toothbrush and extra socks in my pocket—I can recall. Just about.

One Word More

By RALPH MCGILL.

The Gentle Art Of Rousing The Rabble

It long has been a fond dream that one day the electorate of Georgia and the rest of the nation would not hang so earnestly on the words of the political rabble rousers.

In addition to tenacity, lack of soil conservation programs, adequate educational facilities, health programs and other fleas on the southern body-politic, there has been the political rabble rouser. He was responsible for most of the other fleas which kept the southern dog flea-bitten, hungry and in poor health.

The "rabble-rouser" could tell a few jokes, compare his opponent with a jackass, call up the ghosts of Ben Hill and Bob Toombs and Tom Watson and wind up with a few screams of the eagle and win an election. The fact that he had no issue at all seemed to make no difference. His opponent might have a sensible, well-thought-out plan. It made no difference.

The present campaigns in Georgia are encouraging signs that the electorate of Georgia isn't harkening with the old-time enthusiasm to the spell-binding phrases of the rabble-rouser.

Time was when the farmer could see his state markets mismanaged, conducted with favoritism, employed as political patronage machines or entirely closed and not get greatly concerned if he had in exchange a $3 automobile tag. The fact that he got no more for his crops; had no market place wherein to sell them; that the teachers to teach his children or to provide the funds for a seven months' school, did not seem to weigh as much as a cleverly turned phrase or a rousing speech about the glories of the past heroes of the political scene.

He could be told that the tuberculosis test for cattle was bunk; that all the schooling any community needed was the old one-room school of the past with one teacher striving to instruct a half dozen different classes and ages; that soil conservation was just politics and that Georgia had the greatest history of any state in the union. All this the farmers seemed to take to their hearts with great glee.

This was especially true if the men announcing such ideas held up their pants with suspenders which hung on nails instead of buttons and if, during a meeting in some hotel room the candidate removed his shoes and showed a pair of socks with holes in the heels. The candidate spoke informally of having gone barefooted as a country boy so long he never got used to shoes this alone was worth 500 votes.

A candidate with a sound, intelligent platform which provided real education, pay for teachers, more money for health and a plan to give the negro schools a fair share of the money used for state education. Yet it was John B. Gordon, hero of General Robert E. Lee's great retreat from Gettysburg and the subsequent agony along the road to Appomattox, who had the most of the plan.

What About The Old Heroes Of Georgia?

It is a bit interesting to look back at the old heroes of Georgia's political scene. Very few of the Georgia politicians of the modern vintage have been willing to give the negro schools a fair share of the money used for state education. Yet it was John B. Gordon, hero of General Robert E. Lee's great retreat from Gettysburg and the subsequent agony along the road to Appomattox, who had the most of the plan.

His campaign for free education for the negro. This was almost immediately after the War Between the States.

One of our most famous rabble rousers used to call up the ghost of John B. Gordon in one of his speeches as he reached the climax of his appeal to state pride. It was a bit ironic that this great governor and general should have been included in a speech which appealed to race prejudice.

Another of them used to speak with great reverence of Ben Hill. It was Ben Hill who said that no matter what education cost it all was worth more than that had been paid for it. It also was Ben Hill who had great reverence for law and order and for the constitution of his country and his state. The politician who most invoked the memory of Ben Hill violated both and set education back a dozen years.

Henry W. Grady, Joel Chandler Harris and other great leaders of Georgia spoke with voices of intelligence, patriotism, tolerance and humanity. Politicians of modern days, unworthy to have tied the shoe laces of these men of the past, have invoked their names in speeches which were unintelligent, intolerant and entirely lacking in the niceties of human behavior.

Georgians May

Be Looking To Results

There are indications the farmers of Georgia are giving heed to the motto of a program. Open markets for farmers are better than promises of markets; the men who actually have got work started on rural electrification and who have worked for bills which provided the opportunity to purchase farms, are more to be desired than a fantastic promise. Open schools and teachers with their salaries paid are better than promises.

Things have been done for the farmer. Plans are in progress which will bring him more co-operation and assistance. Social legislation has not yet brought all anticipated benefits yet it has been, for the first time, actually initiated. Not merely promised.

It may not be—but there is at least hope that the rabble-rouser is fading from the scene and with him illiteracy, tenacity, inadequate health and all the associated fleas which he brought to the body politic.

The Roads Went by Devious Ways, But All Led at Last to Rome

By ROBERT QUILEN.

Billie was a handsome little boy with a beautiful body and a mind uncommonly bright. On his second birthday, three things happened to him.

He was spanked for being naughty. He was praised for saving his pet rabbit from a frantic young dog. He broke his mother's eyeglasses in the midst of hilarious play, and wept with remorse at the sight of blood on her cheek.

Something happened to his brain cells that day. He felt sudden and resentful. And thereafter he thought only of himself. As the years passed, he seemed as happy as other kids, but this was only when he had his own way. If crossed in anything, he looked hateful and mean. He could be charming when it suited his purpose, but he loved nobody and the world seemed his enemy.

At 9 p. m. on August 10 of his 23rd year, he slipped out of a dark office building with bulging pockets. It was his tenth burglary in as many days. Something in his manner attracted a policeman, who called to him. He ran. As he turned the corner at Main and Fair, a gas main exploded and his career was ended.

But on his second birthday, something else, beyond human knowledge, happened to his brain cells.

Thereafter, through the years, he struggled to earn praise. He led his school in athletics. He was daring but never reckless. He lived above reproach, and asked no reward but the good opinion of the right kind of people. At 23 he was a cool, steady, respected by the force. At 9 p. m. on August 10 he was chasing a criminal at the corner of Main and Fair when a gas main exploded and killed him.

On his second birthday, something mysteriously affected his brain cells and made compassion his dominant trait. Thereafter he was neither better nor worse than other boys—just a regular kid who did the usual things, but pity grew in him. Driven by the urge to be useful, he took college work in his stride, made a brilliant record in medical school, and at 23 was the only interne in the city treated as an equal by hospital physicians.

On August 10, as the city clock began the stroke of 9, he stepped from an ambulance at the corner of Main and Fair. At that instant the pavement rose under his feet; he heard a deafening roar; a merciful blackness descended, and he had come to his destined end.

THIS MORNING

By JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES II.

"With earth's first clay they did the last man knead,
And there, of the last harvest sowed the seed,
And the first dawn of Creation wrote
What the last Morn of reckoning shall read."

There was economic planning for you, with a vengeance, but the Lord alone could do it. "Planned economy, measured in the light of history and human relations," thinks Associate Editor Ralph Jones in The Atlanta Constitution, "can become but bitter illusion. Amen and amen! Whether it is the planned economy government sometimes dreams or attempts the one great business combines or agreements accomplish. Once, before he became a supreme court justice, Hugo Black was at a party in Birmingham where they played a question and answer game. One of the questions, drawn perhaps with Mr. Black in mind, ran like this: "Do you believe that any man, or group of men, is wise, honest, and visioned enough to fix fairly to all parties concerned the price of a single pair of shoes?" And Mr. Black's answer was "No, not even a meat market."

He had in mind the necessarily dual nature of the task undertaken by those who oppose and would prevent the giving of this country over to planned economy. Planning imposed by government won't work, and neither will planning imposed by monopolies or dominating aggregates of merchants, manufacturers or financiers.

Now that a little of the heat has died down, longer light should indicate to most of us that Mr. Aubrey Williams is a very noble fellow and that his Youth Administration has done a very noble work, but that, like so many who are sure of their own nobility to-day, he is inexcusably willing to excuse himself from the rules. This is one of our great troubles today, it seems to this column. There are too many noble men excusing themselves on the grounds of their nobility. Like Mr. Williams, they are so sure of their purpose that they believe any means to that purpose is justifiable, even the rule of a democracy involved in using the power of public funds to perpetuate one's group in power.

The first thing in America now, it seems to us, should be this—that nobody is quite noble enough to be excused from playing the game according to the rules and under direction of the umpire.

However far apart they may be on some things, famed Editor Grover Hall, of the Montgomery Advertiser, told a conference on race and education at Troy State Teachers' College, Alabama, last week, the white and negro races in the south "have a common interest in the better things of life." The point was never more timely or well-taken, it seems to us, than the white and black races here have simply got to get along with each other. They live in the same land, they are bound by the same economy and geography, they depend upon each other in a million measures, and in the long run neither is going to prosper in the

A MOUNTAIN WOMAN.

R. F. D. No. 4, Box 30.

The above letter will serve to confirm the belief in many hearts that "This is our Father's world," and more—that there are countless people in the crowded cities and in the quiet country places who are daily sustained by the consciousness of His presence and power and peace. With Frank L. Stanton they can sing:

This old world 'we're livin' in
Is mighty hard to beat;
We got a thorn with every rose,
But ain't the roses sweet?

Georgia Governor.

George R. Gilmer was born in 1798. When 39, and Governor of Georgia, he became the first elective official to defy a ruling of the United States supreme court. President Jackson, who had no love for the court either, commented: "John Marshall made the decision, now let him enforce it." It wasn't enforced.

OFF THE RECORD—By Ed Reed

WORLD'S WINDOW

By PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

The President On Education.

In addressing the National Education Association's convention, Mr. Roosevelt spoke of the "important and difficult problem of keeping education intellectually free," and he added, "such things did not need as much emphasis a generation ago; but when the clock of civilization can be turned back by burning libraries, by exiling scientists, artists, musicians, writers, and teachers, by dispersing universities and by censoring news and literature and art, an added burden is placed upon those countries where the torch of free thought and free learning still burns bright."

"If the fires of freedom and civil liberties burn low in other lands, they must be made brighter in our own. If in other lands the press and books and literature of all kinds are censored, we must redouble our efforts here to keep it free. If in other lands the eternal truths of the past are threatened by intolerance, we must provide a safe place here for their perpetuation."

"Yes, there may be times when men and women in the turmoil of change lose touch with the civilized gains of centuries of education; but the gains of education are never really lost. Books may be burned and cities sacked, but truth, like the yearning for freedom, lives in the hearts of humble men and women."

"The ultimate victory, the ultimate victory of tomorrow, is with democracy, and through democracy with education, for no people can be kept eternally ignorant or eternally enslaved."

Words Needed To Be Said.

These are the words of a liberal and needed to be said at this time. I can imagine the future the President's words will create in Europe. In France the majority of the newspapers will display that speech under heavy banner heads, for in France, which is today the last remaining great bulwark of liberalism on the continent, the President's words mean "a strap to lift up the heart." Men will take courage again to fight on against the night which is darkening the European sky.

In Germany there will be gnashing of teeth and no doubt a virulent rebuttal by the little man Goebbels, who had so much to do with turning universities into drill halls and whose chief henchman once remarked that when he heard the word culture he instinctively felt for his revolver.

But there is also something for us to remember and it is this: Those nations in Europe did not willingly set about to become the slaves of their despots. Their masses were frustrated, disillusioned, unemployed, in destitution and distress. They seized hold of political doctrines which promised relief. It was a case of any port in a storm and clamping to a straw. Democracy did not work over there. Democracy was hampered and vilified, often was deliberately brought into disrepute.

Of such forces we have an abundant share already in America, too. The ideals of democracy may be held sky high. It will be of no avail if they remain, as is often the case today, some metaphysical substance hanging in mid-air. They must be translated into practice and no sabotage or undermining should be permitted. Intolerance, racial hatred and despotism should not be allowed to sneak in by the back door. We must be on our guard.

Chaplin To Play Dumb In 'Talkie' He's Planning

HOLLYWOOD, July 6.—(P)—Charlie Chaplin will appear in a talking picture—but very likely the talking will be done by the other characters.

Tim Durant, a scenarist who has been working with Chaplin at Pebble Beach, Cal., for the last six months, said today the "silent" comedian's future plans include a four-reel talkie.

"The story is written around the character he plays," said Durant, "and he believes now that it will be best for him not to 'break the silence' he has maintained in his previous sound films."

CHARGES AGAINST JUDGE WITHDRAWN

Solicitor General Rowland Takes Action 'In Interest of Harmony.'

WRIGHTSVILLE, Ga., July 6.—(P)—Solicitor General Roy Rowland, of the Dublin judicial circuit, today withdrew warrants issued against Judge J. Eugene Cook, of the city court of Wrightsville, and R. O. Bridges, a constable.

The action halted a commitment hearing scheduled before Justice of the Peace W. M. Shurling. Shurling said Saturday Judge Cook had served a distress warrant against Solicitor Rowland in seeking to collect rent for a client, Mrs. E. A. Lovett. Solicitor Rowland charged the move was an attempt "to embarrass me" and took out the warrant, one charging Judge Cook with causing an illegal levy and the other charging Bridges with trespass.

In a prepared statement, the solicitor general said to Justice Shurling today:

"The defendants in this case have clearly violated the law and I do not know what action the grand jury may take. However, this being a private prosecution, I do not care to press the charges at this time and respectfully ask to withdraw the warrants. I have no apology to make, but in the interest of harmony in this county I hereby withdraw these warrants."

Judge Cook in a statement said "I am denying that I have violated the law in any manner whatsoever, and submit there is no law in this state that makes it a felony for a landlord to collect rent from a person who attempts to defeat his debts by taking out a statutory homestead exemption as far as that debt relates to a landlord's claim for rent."

"Mr. Rowland refused to accept my challenge in allowing me to be heard in a commitment trial by withdrawing his warrant," Judge Cook said in his statement. "As a law-abiding citizen" had been questioned and charged the solicitor general does not have "the intention to ever permit the case to have a public hearing."

Interest of Public Aids Films, Trade Magazine Editor Says; Conventions Discussed by Californian.

By Lee Fuhrman

Active interest of the public in the "movies" has done much to improve the quality of films, in the opinion of William G. Formby, of Kansas City, Mo., editor of a national motion picture trade publication.

Formby, taking a "busman's" holiday, visited old friends along Atlanta's "film row" yesterday, he revealed as he was "cornered" in the lobby of a downtown hotel.

Formby lived in Atlanta from 1928 to 1931. In 1930, he worked on a weekly film review which had been started by Anna Aiken Patterson, well-known Atlanta woman who received an honorary degree from the University of Georgia a few years ago.

"Movies are all I know," said Mr. Formby, "and so that's all I can talk about. A lot of folks think motion picture producers aren't interested in what the public thinks. But that's far from right. Producers are vitally interested in that."

"In the past five years, the interest of the public in films has done more than any other single factor to improve the moral and entertainment values of pictures. Such interest is constructive and objective. Producers welcome it. The days of the 'public be hanged' are gone forever."

CONVENTIONS SERIOUS, SPECIALIST SAYS

"There is a tendency to regard conventions as just an excuse to get together and sing 'Sweet Adeline,'" said W. G. Swanson, vice president and general manager of the San Francisco Convention and Tourist Bureau, speaking from a deep chair in a hotel lobby.

"But that's not all of the picture. Organized society means simply that society is formed into organizations. To survive, those various organizations must meet. So organized society rides the vehicle we know as conventions."

"Of course, there is a place for conviviality in the meeting of such groups. But it's far from the whole story. Take a convention of the American Medical Association, for instance. When such a group meets in convention and decides upon a certain policy, that

U. S. Refuses To Transfer Hanging Of Prisoner To Please Michigan

WASHINGTON, July 6.—(P)—Governor Frank Murphy, of Michigan, failed tonight to get a scheduled hanging of a federal prisoner transferred somewhere beyond Michigan's boundaries.

The government went ahead with preparations to execute Anthony Chebatoris, slayer and bank robber, at Milan, Mich., Friday morning.

Murphy had appealed to President Roosevelt to intervene, saying that the hanging would be distasteful to Michigan residents. Michigan does not have the death penalty, except for treason.

Mr. Roosevelt telephoned to the Justice Department, suggesting that some other state be chosen for the hanging if consistent with federal law.

Consequently a conference was held at the Justice Department today. Attorney General Cummings refused to discuss it afterwards, but it was learned that no loophole was found which would justify removing Chebatoris to another state. Under a law passed June 19, 1937, federal prisoners sentenced to death must die by whatever method is prescribed by laws of the state within which the sentence is imposed. There is no provision for transferring men scheduled for execution into other jurisdictions.

Woman Against Woman

By MARGARET CULKIN BANNING

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

Stephen Holland, brilliant young lawyer, and his wife, Cynthia, have been divorced without scandal. She has tried to hold him through his love for their little daughter, Ellen, but has failed because he is convinced she is so hard and dominating that their marriage is a failure. In Washington, he meets Maris Kent. They become engaged. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT VI.

"I thought you should know at once, my dear," she said when Cynthia handed the letter back to her.

"Thank you, Mother. It is a shock, of course—I've always had a hope that it was all a mistake—that one day I'd go to the door and Steve would be there—come back to Ellen and me—that we could pick up our life where we left it fall. Well, that hope is gone."

"You are a brave girl, Cynthia, and I love you. And you aren't the only person who hoped that I, too, had thought—and now he writes this!"

"We might have foreseen this, Steve's free."

"I've always loved you, Cynthia. I hope you are right, dear. Of course Steve is fine himself—but the best men can be such fools where a pretty woman is concerned. He made a great mistake when he gave you up. He may be making another now."

"Mother, your loyalty to me has been, after Ellen, the one comfort I've had since Steve went away. But you mustn't let that loyalty prejudice you against Steve's wife. I am proud that you still treat me as a daughter. One thing I want you to do—never let me feel sorry for myself. Why should I? After all there will always be one bond between Steve and me which nothing can break—Ellen."

"I won't have you humiliated, Cynthia."

"As long as I know I have done nothing shameful, I cannot be humiliated. I want to stay in your life. Steve will expect you to make a place in it for his new wife, too. You owe her loyalty, as well as me. She is probably younger than I; certainly she is less experienced, perhaps she is not one who can face unpleasant things. You must stand by her. It may not be altogether easy for her, here in the town where I have lived all my life."

"I only hope she is half the woman you are, dear," said Mrs. Holland.

For the first time since he had come to Washington, Stephen and Maris did not see each other that day. He had to go to Baltimore on some business and Maris was busy with last-minute preparations for the wedding.

Stephen's train was late and when he arrived at the hotel he found he had little time to bathe and dress for the evening. Then he read a telegram which had come from his mother. No matter how it delayed him, he must speak to her before he went to the party. He didn't know exactly why the tone of the telegram worried him, but it did. She had said she could not come to Washington for the wedding which was to take place in about 10 days; of course Stephen and his bride must stay with her when they came home, until they found a house. There was nothing of disapproval or ungraciousness in the telegram, but it made him apprehensive.

"So—," he said to himself when he hung up the phone, "Cynthia has started to work on rather a ready. Brava, is she? Generous? Oh yes—I'll have to be on my guard, I see."

Maris had a little frown on her face when he arrived at the party. "Whatever made you so late, darling?" she asked. "I was worried. Everybody is here and giving me commiserating looks—I know they have been thinking you are deserting me just before the altar. And as for Grammy—the dark looks she has been giving!"

"I had a wire from my mother. I phoned her. No, there's nothing wrong. I just wanted to make sure, when she said she couldn't come to the wedding and—well, I wanted to tell her, as well as write her, what a lucky man I am."

Maris' hand on his arm pressed it tightly and her voice was serious when she spoke.

"Oh Steve, do you think she will like me? Really and truly like me?"

"Don't waste time asking foolish questions. She will adore you."

"Oh, I do hope so. But women don't always like the women their sons marry, you know."

"Don't let that worry you, dear. Mother is grand and you are grand and—"

"But even if she doesn't like me—if nobody in your town cottons to me, Steve, I can stand it—as long as you do. That's all that really matters. And now I have to go back to the guests and flaunt you before their eyes."

The first person to speak to them was Mrs. Kingsley. Steve told her she mustn't forget she had promised to dance the first rhumba with him.

"I always promise everybody the first rhumba," she said, "pay no attention to it." Then as she saw Maris had gone in answer to her grandmother's beckoning, she said in a low voice: "Steve, I wrote your mother a long letter about Maris. I told her, among other things, that if I had the whole world from which to choose a wife for you, Maris would be the lucky girl."

"That's fine of you, Aunt Emma," he said. "I know mother will agree with you when she knows Maris. You weren't worried about that, were you?"

"Steve, I'm going to be perfectly frank with you. Your mother and I have known each other, been intimate friends since we went to kindergarten together. I loved her as devotedly as if she were my sister. But the best qualities in her, ironically, often do harm. I'm thinking of her feeling for Cynthia. I admire her for treating her as she does—there is no reason why she shouldn't. But I don't trust Cynthia or her influence over your mother. Just watch out, Steve—don't let Maris have any difficulties which can be avoided. Maybe I'm wrong about Cynthia. I hope so. But somewhere in your mind, remember what I'm saying."

"I will, Aunt Emma," he said. "Don't quote me ever—but I feel just as you do about this."

Mrs. Kingsley had meant to let these be her last words on the subject, but they were not. Just before she and the senator were leaving she asked Maris when they were to be married.

"One day next week," said Maris. "We're not having a real wedding—just grandmother and you and your husband and one or two other close friends. We won't have a big affair. It's not good taste—Steve's had it once."

"I know. I was there. I wondered then how it would turn out."

"Why?"

"I don't know why I felt as I did. Cynthia is beautiful, charming, intelligent—and you know how I love Steve."

"Tell me, Mrs. Kingsley—naturally I can't ask Steve—Cynthia, as you call her, can't make things unpleasant, can she? Would she want to?"

"Maris, dear, I wish I knew the answers to those questions. I don't. All I know is that I never really liked Cynthia. But this I do know. You are going to the place where she and Steve were born, where they lived all their lives. And these small cozy cities, like Maplewood, take divorce and remarriage very hard sometimes. Of course plenty of people are divorced and remarry again. But it isn't the same as being in a big city. And there is something else—people in small cities often resent those who come from outside. They are clannish, you might say."

Maris held her head high and her voice had an unusual note in it, as she spoke.

"You know—nothing you or anyone else can say will keep me from marrying Steve."

"It shouldn't," said the older woman. "You love each other. That is what is important. I didn't mean to say these things to you—but I'm glad I have. It is best that you should know that you will be on a spot at first. You'll win out, I know. But at first, my dear, you'll be in enemy territory."

It was a month after their marriage before Stephen told Maris to his home town. The happy days they had spent together had quite erased from their minds the vague fears each had had but not confessed to the other.

"There's the car for us," said Stephen as the train pulled into the station. "Mother is waiting at home to receive us—we didn't want your first meeting to be in public."

"I'm glad. First impressions are important. I've always heard—and did you ever see any woman who could make a graceful descent from a Pullman? If you ever did, you're one ahead of me."

Mrs. Holland was standing by the window when the car drew up in front of the house. She smiled and waved to them and then walked quickly to the hall to meet them.

"I'm so glad to meet you, my dear," she said as she held out her hand to Maris. Then she turned to Steve and kissed him.

PROGRESS OF THE CLOCK.

If you had paid a visit to Paris 578 years ago, you might have seen a man at work on a clock. His name was Henri de Vick, and the clock he was finishing was to be placed near the top of the king's palace.

It was a new-style clock—that is, a new style for that time in history. A weight of 500 pounds supplied the power. There was a big crank to pull the weight up into Clocks with springs were invented about a century and a half later. A German locksmith named Henlein was a pioneer in making such clocks. He produced one which would run for 40 hours when the spring was wound up.

Not much more than a hundred years after the spring clock came into use, the clock-makers added a minute hand, also a hand to tell the seconds! What a step in progress, if only the seconds and minutes were right!

As time went on, people asked for better and better clocks, and got them. For a long period people supposed that a clock had to have a pendulum to keep good time, but ways were found to make excellent spring clocks with no pendulum.

The old pendulum clock had to stand upright, or it would stop. The present style of spring clocks will keep time even if they are lying sideways, face down, or upside down.

Spring clocks have been made which will run as long as 400 days—more than a year—with one winding.

In a small town in Sweden, a clock of a very interesting kind was made in 1916. It had weights, but did not need a human hand to wind it. There was no electric power, no spring power.

For 22 years the clock has been going and keeping good time. How does it do it? The answer is the changing pressure of the air. It is so cleverly made that changes in the barometer will make the weights rise from time to time, and thus supply the spring clock with "perpetual motion," it seems very close to it.

on McLain Successor.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 6.—(AP) Governor Browning steadfastly refused to call a special election to fill the office of district attorney general in Shelby county today in the face of a ruling by Attorney General Beeler holding that he must.

At stake was control of the key post, left vacant by the death Monday of District Attorney General W. Tyler McLain, for years an important figure in the E. H. Crump political organization which is opposed to Browning's bid for re-nomination in the August 4 primary.

Under state law the Governor has the power to appoint a temporary district attorney general to fill the unexpired term and then fill the vacancy permanently by calling an election "at the next biennial election recurring more than 30 days after the vacancy occurs."

LONDON BLAMES
SLUMP ON F. D. R.Declares Depression Is 'Political' in Charging 'Nagging at Business.'

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, July 6.—(AP)—Alf M. Landon replied to President Roosevelt's recent fire-side address tonight with a charge the present depression was brought on by methods and policies of the administration.

This depression, he said, is "purely political."

He characterized the President's speech as "the New Deal version of why we have 12 million people unemployed."

The 1936 Republican presidential nominee spoke over a nationwide radio network. It was the first of a series of speeches he is expected to deliver during the coming congressional campaign.

Landon contended that "because Mr. Roosevelt has not been successful in restoring employment he adopts the strategy of nagging at business."

"Smoke Screen."

Mr. Roosevelt, Landon said, "is adept at using beautiful words which appeal to the emotions for the purpose of creating a smoke screen to hide his administration blunders."

The former Kansas Governor said that if the President would "practice what he preaches" in the way of governmental administration, Republicans would "fight shoulder to shoulder with him to achieve the social progress and the economic recovery which we all desire and need."

He struck particularly at what he called governmental "financial recklessness," and "the use of WPA money to buy votes."

Replying to Mr. Roosevelt's fire-side appeal for the election of "liberal candidates," Landon commented:

"The President seems to feel that all he has to do is wave the flag and shout: 'All liberals on this side.' It is not quite as simple as that."

"Every liberal recognizes that new conditions throughout the world call for new practical remedies. Every liberal wants a sound, strong government, capable of meeting these new conditions."

"But we do not want this government to be constantly edging toward a governmental absolutism, which is the case under Mr. Roosevelt."

"The real liberal doesn't believe that the whole solution lies in taking economic power away from the individual and giving it to the government."

BROKER SURRENDERS ON LARCENY CHARGE

NEW YORK, July 6.—(AP)—Philip A. Frear, a broker of Washington, D. C., and son of former Congressman James Frear, of Wisconsin, surrendered at District Attorney Dewey's office today in connection with his indictment charging grand larceny in the alleged looting of a number of investment trusts.

He was immediately arraigned in general sessions court where he pleaded innocent and was released under $10,000 bail.

Lena Charlie Makes Final Appearance

Lena Charlie—the monkey mascot of the Women's Overseas Service League, made its final appearance last night at the banquet for the delegates. At the left is Miss Patricia Hoole, of Milwaukee, Wis., a delegate and owner of Lena Charlie, and General Charles P. Summerall. The monkey is named for Miss Lena Hitchcock, of Washington, D. C., past national president of the League and General Summerall.

"You'd better be in San Francisco next year," says "cowgirl" Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin (right) to Miss E. Edna Scott, national president of the Women's Overseas Service League, as she "threatened" Miss Scott in wild western fashion. The League's convention closed last night. San Francisco was selected as the 1939 convention city.

World War Women Were Pioneers,
Summerall Says at Banquet Here

By LEE FUHRMAN.

Women who served during the World War have "pioneered for the future," General Charles P. Summerall, former chief of staff of the A. E. F., last night told delegates to the 18th national convention of the Women's Overseas Service League.

General Summerall, now president of the Citadel, military school at Charleston, S. C., and with whom many of the League members served in France 20 years ago, was principal speaker at the banquet which concluded the four-day session of the organization.

"You and the thousands of women who responded and performed your vital tasks have pioneered for the future," he said.

"Your reward is an inheritance of pride and accomplishment that you alone may share. The next call to arms must see the whole nation mobilized. Women must take their places with the armies, not under civilian administration, but with a military status."

"They may do more than you because of greater opportunity and your experience—but they cannot afford to do less."

Touching upon the "forgotten" women who served during the war, General Summerall said:

"The American women with the expeditionary forces had a military status, and thus became eligible for such benefits as may have been conferred by subsequent legislation."

"There was another group of women, however, who rendered equally meritorious and necessary services in voluntary capacity, but to whom no benefit has come from the government."

Morale of Soldiers.

"It soon became evident that the morale of our soldiers could not be maintained without affording them some comfort and relaxation not included in the military routine. This need was promptly met by the different welfare societies and organizations."

"Even during the operations, canteens and refreshment huts were established where the presence of women made them seem like home to the weary and nerve-wracked soldiers."

"The Salvation Army sent only 104 women overseas, but they captured the imagination and the affections of the A. E. F. in a remarkable way. Perhaps, there was a kinship between the doughnut and the doughboy."

Mrs. John T. Toler, chairman of the banquet committee, made the address of welcome and the invocation was pronounced by Mrs. Alonzo Richardson. Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin acted as toastmistress.

Four former national presidents made short talks. These were Lena Hitchcock, of Washington, D. C.; Edith Davison, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Faustine Dennis, of Washington, and Shirley Farr, of Brandon, Vt.

Others who spoke briefly were Governor Rivers, Mayor Hartsfield, Logan Kelley, state commander of the American Legion, General J. L. Reeves, Miss E. Edna Scott, present national president; John M. Slaton Jr., Bishop H. J. Mikell, the Rev. Theodore S. Will and Mrs. Sam Inman.

Madame Cara Ginn sang several numbers accompanied by Mrs. Lydia Stanford at the piano.

Reports Made.

The concluding sessions of the convention, which opened last Sunday with delegates from all parts of the country in attendance, began yesterday morning with reports of Hazel B. Neilson, chairman of the national patriotic committee; Adelia F. Corraze, national extension chairman, and Flavia Williams, national membership committee chairman.

The following were chosen heads of corps areas: Florence Taylor, of New Jersey, second corps area; Ruth B. Mott, of Tampa, fourth corps area; Miriam Heermance, of Chicago, sixth corps area, and Mrs. A. Jackson Peabody, of Tulsa, Okla., eighth corps area.

Miss Claire McAfee, of Philadelphia, Pa., was chosen a member of the relief committee. A panel discussion of ways and means, and sightseeing to interesting and historic Atlanta points featured the convention's afternoon.

A number of reunion luncheons were also held yesterday. The delegates chose San Francisco as the convention city for 1939.

BAB'S COUNT COSTS
MORE THAN PRINCEParting With Dane Far Different From Farewell to Alexis Mdivani.

LONDON, July 6.—(AP)—The astronomical demands credited to Count Court Haugwitz-Reventlow promised today to make the former Barbara Hutton's turbulent parting with the Danish nobleman far costlier than her "amiable" farewell to the Georgian Prince, Alexis Mdivani.

The dime store heiress called the Prince "very sweet, very wonderful" and said he was not getting a single nickel from her as she set out in 1935 for her Remp divorce and quick remarriage to the Count.

Now she has the titled Dane under bail in Bow Street police court where one of her solicitors pictured him as demanding $5,000,000 and their son, Lance, as the price of a divorce or separation.

Describing his conversation with the Count, the solicitor, William M. Mitchell, said Count Court was "insulted" by a proposed settlement of $250,000.

The Count waited in a West End hotel for his day in court next Wednesday. But whether he would go into the financial angles of the dispute with his wife was uncertain.

Likewise, it was uncertain whether he would name the "London society gentleman" who, it was hinted, is the Countess' new admirer whom Count Court threatened to "shoot like a dog."

The present phase of the case concerns only the question whether he threatened his wife.

The heiress revealed in August, 1935, three months after the divorce, that she had settled an annuity of $350,000 on Prince Alexis. That disclosure was nine days after the Prince was killed in an automobile accident near Barcelona, Spain.

She was reported also to have made a large settlement upon him at the time of their marriage. But part of that was returned to her when he left her one-fifth of his estate, the Countess' share amounting to nearly $100,000.

NEW YORK, July 6.—(AP)—Dr. Cassius Way, 57, official veterinarian of the Belmont Park, Empire City and Saratoga race tracks, was unanimously elected president-elect of the American Veterinary Medical Association at its 57th annual convention today. He will take office in 1939.

Dr. Way, who was graduated in law from Cornell University in 1905, has been an expert in the care of thoroughbred horses and pure-blooded cattle for the last 20 years.

OLD DEAL VS. NEW IN MARYLAND

BALTIMORE, July 6.—(AP)—Maryland's Democratic senatorial campaign, giving promise of becoming one of the hardest-fought ever seen in this state, crystallized today along the "Roosevelt and Lewis vs. Tydings line" while opponents sparred awaiting opening of the formal contest leading to the September 12 primary.

Preliminary statements left little doubt the issue is strictly "Old Deal" against "New Deal."

Senator Millard E. Tydings' first opponent, Representative David J. Lewis, ardent New Dealer, bared

Barkley's congressional record and urging his renomination.

McDonald, calling at the White House today, carried a sheaf of graphs and charts to illustrate a recent upturn in building operations. Small home mortgages selected for appraisal totaled $36,000,000 in June, he said. This was 75 per cent higher than in June, 1937.

McDonald interpreted the building statistics as a favorable economic sign. He said the construction increase would have beneficial effects in many lines and would help reduce unemployment.

Secretary Ickes, who runs the billion-dollar PWA program, went over a long list of projects with the President and said he would announce later presidential approval of a number of them.

Allocates Hospital Funds.

Feeding PWA money into a new hospital, Mr. Roosevelt allocated $13,000,000 for construction of veterans' hospitals. The chief executive urged Brigadier General Frank T. Hines, the veterans' administrator, to have projects under way by August 15.

The report that Mr. Roosevelt probably would appoint a wage-hour administrator tomorrow came from Charles V. McLaughlin, acting labor secretary, who remained for a conference with the President after an afternoon cabinet meeting.

McLaughlin said the President still was considering numerous persons for the position, and that a decision was likely before he leaves on the western trip.

At the President's conference on monopoly, Douglas suggested that a partial allocation of funds be made to executive agencies for carrying on research work.

The 12-member investigating committee was given $500,000 by congress, but 400,000 of this was placed under the President's control for distribution among participating government agencies.

Homeward Voyage To Start

ON BOARD SCHOONER GENERAL A. W. GREELY, OFF REINDER POINT, Greenland, July 6.—(By Wireless)—The MacGregor Arctic expedition has moved from its base camp on shore to the schooner General A. W. Greely. Everyone is busy on board, getting the ship ready to start our homeward journey as soon as the ice permits. We hope to reach the States in September.

The ship is still frozen in the ice about 200 yards from open water. The edge of the ice continues to break off with each tide, and open water should reach the ship within a few days.

Commander I. Schlossbach and John Wright—the latter of the British Arctic expedition—returned at the end of the week from a 300-mile trek up the Greenland ice cap. While flying over the ice cap last winter, Commander Schlossbach thought he observed some new land projecting through the ice cap. As most of the snow has melted from the land now, the two men discovered that what the aviator had seen was a continuation of the land at the head of Ingfield gulf.

The Romance Jells
But Not the Berries

ST. LOUIS, July 6.—(AP)—It was the romance—not the berries—that jelled for Alex Schwartz, who found a bride in a box of strawberries.

Back in April, the 33-year-old huckster, related, he discovered a note in a box of fruit, telling of the loneliness of 18-year-old Loree Shaw.

He wrote, enclosing his picture. She did likewise. Last Saturday Schwartz and Loree were married at Searcy, Ark., near her home.

But after the ceremony the bride and her parents had a talk. She left with them and did not return.

Schwartz took his troubles to Congressman C. Arthur Anderson today and suggested "there ought to be a law." The congressman was noncommittal.

his campaign cry, in his announcement for the nomination: "It's Roosevelt and Lewis Against Tydings." "New Deal Against Old Deal."

Nor did Tydings, announcing for his third term as senator, leave any room for doubt about the campaign line. He is seeking re-election, he stated bluntly, on his record. "If I am re-elected, I will continue to vote as my conscience directs," Tydings said.

Whechel Speaks.

Congressman B. Frank Whechel also spoke, discussing the state and federal government's fulfillment of the need for more recreational facilities.

Mayor J. J. Baggett officiated at the dedicatory exercises as master-of-ceremonies.

Governor Rivers, Congressman Whechel, members of the Gwinnett county Democratic executive committee and others were entertained before the afternoon exercises at a luncheon at the home of Sammon.

Mrs. G. C. Montgomery is in charge of the new playground, which is situated on grounds surrounding the old Lawrenceville Seminary.

Larry Miller Faces Bill Crouch in All-Star Game Tonight

All in the GAME
by Jack Troy

There will be a delegation of All-Star writers from the other Southern league towns for the Cracker-All-Star baseball game tonight at Ponce de Leon park.

BILL KEEFE.

It is to be a real event. Its appeal is so far-reaching that Bill Keefe, sports editor of the Times-Picayune from away down yonder in New Orleans, has consented to leave the food and his yacht to attend. Another New Orleans sports editor, Fred Digby, will make the trip, too.

The All-Star writers' lineup includes: Fred Russell, sports editor of the Nashville Banner, and Raymond Johnson, sports editor of The Tennessean. Keefe, of The Picayune, and Digby, of The States. Dave Bloom, Memphis Commercial-Appeal, and George Bugbe, Press-Scimitar. Ben Epstein, Little Rock Gazette, and Allen Tilden, Democrat.

Wirt Gammon, Chattanooga Times; H. L. Nations, News, and E. T. Bales, Free Press. Zipp Newman, Birmingham News, and Bob Phillips, Age-Herald. Bob Wilson, Knoxville News-Sentinel, and Fletcher Sweet, Journal.

Atlanta writers will augment the gathering of the typewriter-pounding clan.

Fred Russell, of the Nashville Banner, served on the All-Star committee and arrived a day ahead of the others. He was around yesterday making final plans for the big day—and night.

A BOOST FOR SCOTT.

A visiting writer was talking about the league yesterday. "Since Trammell Scott has been president more good has been accomplished in the Southern league than in the last 10 years," he declared.

Major Scott, as a matter of fact, has gotten a lot of things done. He has worked smoothly and efficiently. He hasn't taken anybody's word for things. He has been around the circuit to see what makes it click, or vice versa.

He has pepped up the umpiring and allowed a little more leeway for players. Before he is through the game will be given back to the players.

President Scott worked hard on the All-Star game. He thought it a great thing, not only for the league, but for the baseball writers. He thought they were due some recognition for their efforts to improve things generally. It's really good to know that President Scott's work is being recognized and appreciated. Atlanta's first league president, entering a new job with two strikes on him, has hit one out of the park.

AND WHATTA RACE!

When a league-leading club can set out on a road trip and lose everything but its shirt and still retain the lead by a good margin you must appreciate that it is quite a race.

Here are some of the things that have happened recently: Nashville bumped off Little Rock. Atlanta

BOBBITT BEATEN IN FOURTH ROUND

Atlanta Youngster Bows to Chester Murphy, Chicago U., 6-4, 6-2.

HAVERFORD, Pa., July 6.—(AP) Another seeded player lost in the fourth round of the National collegiate tennis championship today on the clay courts of the Merion Cricket Club.

Julius D. Heldman, University of California at Los Angeles, seeded No. 4, fell before the steady game of Morey Lewis, Kenyon College, Ohio, 6-3, 6-4.

Among eight survivors were the University of Chicago twins, William Murphy, seeded No. 8, and Chester. William dropped a set conquering William Talbert, University of Cincinnati, 6-1, 2-6, 6-0. Chester created an upset by beating Russell Bobbitt, Georgia Tech youth who toppled Don O'Neill, of Kenyon, Monday.

Joseph Hunt, Southern California, who tops the seedings, advanced by crushing Richard Hoops, California, 6-0, 6-2. Bobby Harman, also of California, kept pace with Hunt and plays him tomorrow. Harman beat Robert Underwood, Stanford, 6-3, 6-3, today.

Texas sent two players into the quarter finals. Frank Guernsey Jr., Seeded No. 3, from Rice, and a resident of Florida, put out Douglas Imhoff, of California, 7-5, 6-3, and Robert Kamrath, of the University of Texas, beat Joseph Fishbach, St. John's University, Brooklyn, Eastern intercollegiate champion, 6-3, 6-3. Last Friday Fishbach defeated Kamrath in the semi-finals of eastern tournament, but today Kamrath refused to play the game Fishbach likes, even though there were long sessions of pat ball.

The Crax got two runs on one hit in the fourth. Bolling walked with one down and Richards was hit in the ribs. Durham fanned but Sauerbrun hit Chatham to fill the bases and Mailho dusted the right field foul line with a double to chase Bolling and Richards across. Mauldin grounded out to end the rally.

Durham was touched for two singles in the first, then retired 14 men in order before Sauerbrun singled in the sixth. Buddy Bates followed with a blow but Marshall Mauldin pulled down Joe Grace's long smash in deep center for the third out.

Chatham singled to open the seventh and Mailho chipped in with his second double, Chatham stopping at third. When Sauerbrun wild pitched Chatham home he was jerked in favor of Hugh Casey, the Atlanta boy. He got rid of Mauldin and Rose, then committed a wild pitch on which Mailho scored.

The Chicks left five men on bases in the last four innings but never looked dangerous.

The Crackers left for home tonight to defend honors in the first Southern league All-Star game tomorrow.

Mailho's 2 Doubles Spark Atlanta Bats

Jack Bolling Reaches First Seven Straight Times Before Being Stopped.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 6.—The Crackers salvaged an even break in the series with the Chicks by collecting a 5-to-0 verdict today behind the clever pitching of chunky Bobby Durham.

It was a hollow sort of triumph, for the Chicks didn't put up a great deal of resistance. Their defense was a bit vulnerable and their pitching, as furnished by Kip Sauerbrun, was spotty. Sauerbrun was victimized for one run on an error, but he yielded eight hits and four other markers, which proved ample.

Durham, just recovering from a sore arm, yielded six hits and was in control of the situation most of the time. Durham was backed by some solid hitting on the part of his mates. Emil Mailho's two doubles counting heavily in the final result. Jack Bolling, who is becoming something of a thorn in the Chicks' side, got on base for his seventh straight time when he beat out a hit in the seventh, but was finally retired on a pop in the eighth.

Hugh Casey relieved Sauerbrun in the midst of a Cracker rally, in the seventh and Paul Paynick pitched the ninth, neither yielding a hit, but the damage to the Chicks had been done long before.

The Crackers got away from the barrier in the second with the help of an error. Bolling beat out a bunt with one down. Paul Richards hit to left and Bolling scored when Yarter let the ball get away from him.

Richards went to third, but died there as Durham and Chatham went out.

The Crax got two runs on one hit in the fourth. Bolling walked with one down and Richards was hit in the ribs. Durham fanned but Sauerbrun hit Chatham to fill the bases and Mailho dusted the right field foul line with a double to chase Bolling and Richards across. Mauldin grounded out to end the rally.

LAWRIN IS LOST FOR REST OF '38

Derby Winner Develops Bowed Tendon; Injury Similar to Dauber's.

INGLEWOOD, Cal., July 6.—(AP) Lawrin, Kentucky Derby winner and one of the top 3-year-old thoroughbreds, developed a bowed tendon this morning and Trainer Ben Jones said the big brown colt may be out of racing for the rest of the year.

The injury was reported to be similar to that which kept Dauber, Lawrin's chief contender, out of the $50,000 American 2-year-old championship race at Hollywood park last Wednesday.

Lawrin, owned by Herbert M. Woolf, of Kansas City, was one of the favorite entries for the $15,000 Derby here Saturday as well as the $50,000 Hollywood Gold Cup race the following Saturday.

"It certainly is strange that both the colts should develop similar injuries after arriving here sound," said Trainer Jones.

Mid-South Officials Convene Here Today

Officials of the Mid-South Amateur Athletic Association will hold a dinner and business meeting at the Ansley hotel this evening at 6:15.

Jim Downey, of Birmingham, president of the association, will head a large delegation of officials here from several southern states. Tab Storch, vice president, from Knoxville, and Ed Hargrave, secretary from Chattanooga, are among those who will attend.

The annual amateur baseball tournament, which will be held in Atlanta in September at Ponce de Leon park, will be one of the main topics of discussion at the meeting.

Trammell Scott, Red Shaw and Thad Holt are Georgia's directors of the association, which covers Dixie in amateur sports the year 'round.

Rodda Will Replace Ailing Leroy Schalk

Ceremonies for First Annual All-Star Game Scheduled To Begin at 8 O'Clock.

By JACK TROY.
Leroy Schalk's hurt again and dependable Bill Rodda, playing his eighth consecutive season with Nashville, will replace him in the All-Star lineup tonight at Ponce de Leon park.

Manager Doc Prothro is undecided as to whether he will start Rodda or Heinie Majeski, Baron second baseman. Both of them will see action.

Prothro's tentative batting order for the All-Stars includes Bernie Snyder (Little Rock), shortstop; Dee Miles (Chattanooga), center field; Hub Walker (Nashville), right field; Joe Grace (Memphis), left field; Paul Campbell (Little Rock), first base; Ray Honeycutt (Chattanooga), third base; Majeski (Birmingham) or Rodda (Nashville), second base; George (New Orleans) or McDougal (Birmingham), catcher.

Prothro has selected Nashville's Bill Crouch to open the game. Manager Paul Richards will start Larry Miller, Dewey Williams will catch.

The Crackers will use their regular lineup and batting order. That is to say, it will be as regular as illness and injuries permit.

BREAKS UP COMBINE.
Schalk's injury breaks up the Little Rock double-play combination which was in prospect. Originally, Doc Prothro was to have his own combination of Snyder, Schalk and Campbell. But addition of Rodda doesn't hurt anything. He's one of the best.

All-star ceremonies will begin at 8 o'clock tonight, with President Trammell Scott in the driver's seat, so to speak.

Players of the All-Star club will be introduced from a star-decorated platform in front of home plate. Visiting newspapermen also will be asked to take a bow.

This constitutes the principal ceremony. As they are introduced the players will be handed their awards for the game which, in this case, amounts to a check for $25 each.

WIDE INTEREST.
The Southern league's first annual All-Star game has attracted wide interest. There has been a heavy demand for seats. But there still are plenty of seats left.

The Southern league would not wish to have fans get the impression there won't be any place to sit. There are enough seats for one and all.

This is important to know because many out-of-town fans are coming to the game. And in all events the seating capacity of Ponce de Leon is not expected to be taxed.

The league, of course, did a great thing in keeping admission prices

Only three of the better players are unable to appear because of illness and injury (Even All-Star teams have their troubles). Other All-Star pitchers who will see action are Red Evans, New Orleans; Garland Braxton, Little Rock, and Woodrow Rich, Little Rock.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

ARREST OF WOMAN
ORDERED IN DEATH

Anonymous Postcard Names Her as Gray Slayer.

HOLLYWOOD, July 6.—(AP)—Arrest of a woman, named in an anonymous postcard as the slayer of King D. Gray, 52, film cameraman, was ordered tonight by Police Captain Wallis.

Wallis announced that the card, bearing a Hollywood cancellation and received today, read: "Beware! Gray was killed by (—). It was signed, 'A Witness to the Crime.'"

Wallis said he placed "credence" in the report, but added he was seeking its author.

Police also said they had established that Gray, who did not drink, purchased the bottle of white wine found with his body in his car in front of Hollywood postoffice last week.

SLAYER SHOT DOWN
BY MISSISSIPPI POSSE

VICKSBURG, Miss., July 6.—(AP)—R. P. Flanagan was shot and killed on his plantation five miles from Cary today and a posse led by Sharkey county officers a short time later killed in a gun battle a negro who resisted arrest.

Sheriff Ewing identified the negro as Tom McGhee, 45, blacksmith on the Flanagan place. He had fled to a cabin a half mile away.

Flanagan, 38, was a prominent Sharkey county planter.

GOMEZ IS LOSER

AS VANDER MEER
WINS CLASSIC, 4-1Rudy York Fans With Bases Full in Dramatic Seventh.

Giants, and Jim Turner, right-hander of the Boston Bees, were warming up furiously in the National league bullpen. But Brown again pulled himself out of the hole by retiring the last batsman, Pinch-Hitter Bob Johnson, on strikes.

On their toes and playing with more spirit and aggressiveness, the Nationals outplayed and outsmarted their favored rivals, notwithstanding the aid and comfort they received from the loose ball-handling of the American leaguers.

While Vander Meer was facing only ten batsmen in the first three frames, yielding only a third-inning single by Cronin, the Nationals were out in front by a one-run margin. Stan Hack, the Cubs' third sacker, who was also a defensive stalwart, opened with a single off Gomez. He galloped to third when Billy Herman's sharp grounder—a potential double-play ball—went through Cronin's hands for an error, and scored on Medwick's long fly to Earl Averill.

The second and what proved to be the deciding National run, in the fourth, was the result of a fully earned by the victorious side. It was manufactured from Mel Ott's three-ply smash to the bleacher corner in right-center, and Ernie Lombardi's single to left with Johnny Allen, of Cleveland, on the firing line for the Americans.

CROWD IN UPROAR.

The most exciting display of fireworks, like a couple of big packages left over from the Fourth of July, came in the seventh inning and kept the big crowd of shirt-sleeved fans in a continual uproar.

Only one American leaguer—Bill Dickey, on a pop fly double that Leo Durocher lost in the sun in the fifth inning—had reached second base off Lee's hurling but Brown was promptly greeted, in the seventh, like a long-lost cousin.

Foxx opened with a single and was forced by DiMaggio. From Joe stole second. After Dickey popped to Hack, Cronin walked and Gehrig scratched a base hit to Durocher.

This filled the bases and the fans with excitement as York was assigned to hit for Allen. The count reached three and two on big Rudy, who then swung and missed a low curve.

Hardly had the furor over this climactic episode subsided when Buck McCormick, rookie first-sacker and one of the four Cincinnati Reds who played a big part in the triumphal procession greeted Lefty Grove with a line single to center, in the Nationals' half of the seventh inning.

The fun began when Leo Durocher laid down a pretty bunt, half way between third base and the pitchers' box. Foxx, who had shifted to third base while Lou Gehrig took over the first base job, was slow picking up the ball. Gehrig also was slow covering first base. The upshot was that Foxx's throw sailed past first and caromed off the box seats. McCormick raced home on this error and Durocher, already credited with a scratch single, completed the circuit on DiMaggio's wild heave into the Nationals' dugout.

THREE IN ROW.

This comedy of miscues took the glamour from Grove's subsequent achievement in retiring Brown, Hack and Herman in succession on strikes.

The answer was that the three National league pitchers, all new comers to the all-star firing line, had good enough control to keep the ball low and out of the "groove" in the pinches. Vander Meer displayed a world of stuff and poise as he baffled the big guns. Only three balls were hit out of the infield off the kid southpaw.

He got a big hand when he fanned Foxx, the No. 1 American league slugger, and an ovation when he completed his three-inning trick without damage.

Gate receipts amounted to $38,469.05, after the deduction of taxes. Expenses figured to be around $10,000. The remainder of the proceeds goes to the ball players' benevolent fund.

Taking advantage of balmy weather, the crowd overflowed Crosley field's seating capacity. More than 1,500 standees backed up the reserve seats and bleachers sell-out. Thousands gathered two hours before game time to watch the all-stars go through their paces, seek autographs and enjoy the preliminary festivities, including a band concert and comedy by Al Schacht.

Outside of the regular lineup of the All-Stars, alternates who will play include Murray Howell (Birmingham), outfield, and Dallas Warren (Knoxville), catcher.

Everything is in readiness for the big game. The Cracker return home from Memphis early today and the All-Stars will be brought here by plane and train. Many other notables, including governors of Southern league states, have been invited.

SITE OF DERBY RACE
WILL BE CHANGED

Increased Interest Necessitates Relocation of Soap Box Derby Classic.

Increased interest in this year's Soap Box Derby sponsored by The Constitution probably will necessitate a new location for the races, H. M. Van Devender, director of the Derby, announced yesterday.

For the past few years the Derby has been held on Northside drive, but as applications continued to pour in, officials began to scout around for a new speedway to accommodate the enlarged entry list.

Announcement of the place for this year's Derby will be made within the next day or two, Van Devender said. The finals are scheduled for July 23.

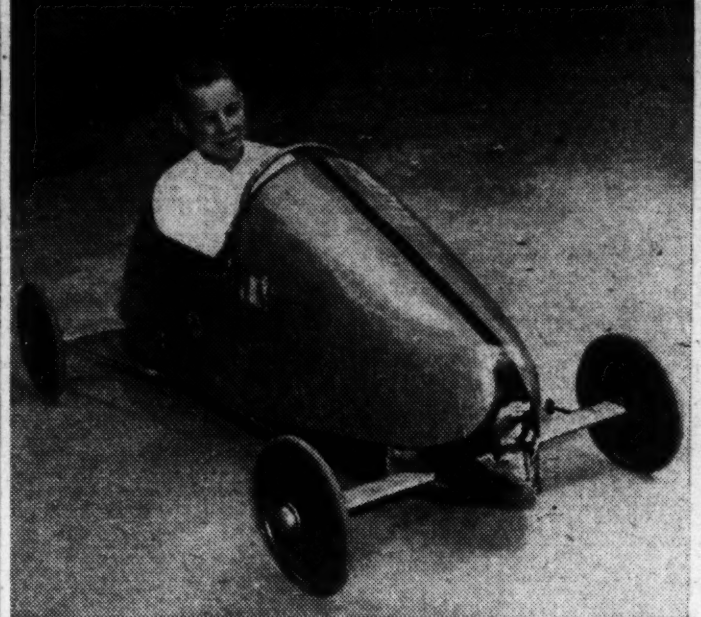

Meanwhile, plans for the zone finals went forward. The first will be held in Carrollton July 14—only a week away. Others will follow at Thomaston and Monroe on July 15, at Marietta on July 20, and at Gainesville on July 22. The zone race at Conyers will be run during the week of July 18.

The six zone finalists will compete in the Atlanta finals. In addition each will be awarded a $55 bicycle by The Constitution. The north Georgia champion will go to Akron, Ohio, to compete in the national Soap Box Derby finals.

Two other prizes were added to the list of awards already announced. A pair of shoes will be given by the Health Spot Shoe Company, and a camera will be awarded by the Cut Rate Drug Company.

Atlanta Chevrolet dealers are co-operating with The Constitution in sponsoring the Derby.

"I'm All Set To Win," Asserts Derby Entrant

"I'm all set to win," says Preston Mauldin, of 1376 Graham street, S. W., as he sits in his new streamlined racer and nervously awaits the first heats of The Constitution's fifth annual Soap Box Derby. The finals will be run July 23 at Soap Box Derby Downs on Northside drive. Preston hopes for better luck than he had two years ago. He was leading to within 25 feet of the finish line when his speedy competitors put on a final spurt and nosed him out.

Spirit of Old South Pervades Setting for W. O. S. L. Banquet

By Sally Forth.

THE hospitality, the traditions, and the charm of the deep south came to full flower last evening as the banquet with which members of the Women's Overseas Service League closed their annual convention at the Biltmore hotel. In fact, the old south came to life, so to speak, in all its most entrancing phases in compliment to the indefatigable band who laid aside the frills and foibles of femininity to serve their country in the late World War.

The first breath of southern atmosphere which pervaded the scene greeted the guests as they were served mint juleps in the hotel foyer leading to the ballroom where the banquet was held. The fragrant aroma from the tall, frosted glasses helped to complete the picture of shining southern dainties, busy behind a bar decorated with huge Georgia watermelons cut in half and the centers filled with gay red roses, feverfew and bluebells.

The ballroom presented a scene that typified Georgia and the south in every perfect detail of decoration. There was a complete reproduction in miniature of Tara, the plantation home near Jonesboro where much of the action centered in Margaret Mitchell's prize-winning novel, "Gone With the Wind"—Tara complete with its colonial mansion, cotton fields, servants' quarters, and magnolia trees. There were huge Georgia watermelons, of the Tom Watson variety, adorning the tables, their centers hollowed out to allow space for arrangements of red roses, white gladioli and daisies, bluebells and blue delphinium. There was an orchestra playing old southern melodies, interspersed with patriotic airs.

On the speakers' table were antique compotes of early American pressed glass filled with colorful Georgia peaches and grapes, the fruit motif being repeated in the festoons of peaches, grapes, cherries and apples which outlined the front of the table. Between the compotes were huge glass domes under which were ranged bowls of small red, white and blue flowers—for all the world like those which must have adorned the tables and mantels in the parlors of Tara.

There were miniature log cabins set in the midst of snowy cotton fields, with tiny covered wagons adding a realistic touch. There were myriads of tall white candles burning in crystal holders, the flames fanned gently by the breezes that floated in from the summer night. There were dainty colonial figurines of Dresden china, their bases wreathed in flowers to form centerpieces for the smaller tables at which congenial groups of guests were seated.

It was a setting to startle the imagination with its sheer beauty and realism and to plunge one into a dream world of high-piled colonial mansions, snowy cotton fields, flower-filled gardens and moon-drenched summer evenings. And credit is due to the ingenuity and artistic skill of Mrs. John T. Toler, one of the most popular and beloved members of the Atlanta unit of the Women's Overseas Service League, who served as chairman of arrangements for the banquet and extended greetings to the guests. Mrs. Toler also introduced the toastmasters, Mrs. Helen Douglas Mankin.

As a crowning touch to the occasion, the evening's program featured as chief speaker a distinguished southern general, Charles Sumner, U. S. A., who is commander of the Citadel at Charleston, S. C. Seated at the speakers' table with Mrs. Toler, Mrs. Mankin and General Sumner were Georgia's Governor, E. D. Rivers, Mrs. Rivers, Miss Edna Scott, of Kansas City, Mo., who was re-elected national president of the Women's Overseas Service League yesterday; Mrs. Alonzo Richardson who gave the invocation; General George Van Horn Moseley, Mayor and Mrs. Charles Hartsfield, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Slaton Jr., General and Mrs. Charles M. Reeves.

When petite Peggy Smith trod the orange blossom trail yesterday to become the bride of Billy Pratt, she wore two treasured heirlooms. One was the 104-year-old gold bracelet that belonged to Mrs. John Pratt, of Lithuania, mother of the groom. The date, March 2, 1837, engraved on the bracelet, is the silent testimonial that on that day Billy's great-grandfather, the late Judge Henry Pope Wooten, presented it to his daughter, Mrs. Benjamin Long, to encircle her slender wrist upon her wedding day. The bracelet belongs to the collection handed down by Mrs. Long, who specified that each piece of jewelry be given to a bride in the family connection, or one marrying into the clan.

The priceless lace handkerchief, the other treasured heirloom, was made by Peggy's great-grandmother for her daughter to carry on her wedding day, when as Caroline Jennings, of England, she married the late Kirk Smith Sr. at a ceremony taking place in

A lovely compliment to Mrs. Pauline Branyon, who leaves soon with her daughter, Miss Nancy Branyon, for a South American cruise, was the farewell luncheon given yesterday by the welfare department of the Fifth District, Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Suggestive of the occasion was the effective centerpiece of the beautifully appointed luncheon table, a blue and white ship filled with forget-me-nots and placed upon a blue mirror to represent the sea. The favors marking the places of the guests were tiny blue and white ships filled with white flowers.

Mrs. E. Stewart, chairman of the department, presided. Other special guests were Mrs. E. M. Bailey, of Acworth, first vice president, and Mrs. Harvie Jordan, executive secretary of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. John D. Evans, president of the Fifth District.

Miss Margaret Smith Becomes Bride of Mr. Pratt at Chapel Rites

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM PRATT.

Centering sincere social interest was the marriage of Miss Margaret Dean Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kirk Smith Jr., and William Benard Pratt, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Pratt, of Lithuania, which was solemnized at noon yesterday in the chapel of the Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist church.

The Rev. Dr. Ryland Knight, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony in the presence of relatives and friends of the young couple. Prior to and during the ceremony Homer Knowles gave a program of organ music.

The chapel was beautifully decorated with masses of palms, before which were placed candelabra holding white tapers and pedestal baskets filled with Easter lilies and white gladioli.

Ushers were Straiton Hard Sr., Burch Bland, uncle of the bride, and Hudson Edwards and William B. Williamson III.

Miss Marian Bedell, cousin of the bride, was her maid of honor and only attendant. She was gowned in a model of hyacinth blue marquisette, featuring a tailored waist, high neckline and long, full skirt. She wore a small turban in a matching shade with a short face veil and carried a bouquet of yellow roses tied with yellow satin ribbons.

The bride entered with her father, by whom she was given in marriage, and they were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Egbert Emory Whitaker.

Her wedding gown of starched bridal chiffon featured a sweetheart neckline to which was attached a high Elizabethan collar trimmed in rosepoint lace that belonged to her paternal grandmother, the late Mrs. Kirk Smith Sr. Her full skirt extended into a long train that was edged with similar lace. She wore a finger-tip tulle veil that was held in place by a coronet of rosepoint lace that belongs to her aunt, Mrs. Straiton Hard. Her bouquet was of white orchids and valley lilies.

Mrs. Smith, the bride's mother, wore a gown of rose chiffon with a picture hat and white accessories. Her corsage was of white orchids. The groom's mother, Mrs. Pratt, was gowned in a model of blue marquisette with matching hat and a corsage of gardenias. Immediately following the ceremony the young couple left for a wedding trip to Florida and Nassau. The bride traveled in a model of turquoise blue silk jersey fashioned shirtwaist style with a gored skirt. With this she wore a crownless toque in a matching shade and a corsage of purple orchids.

Prominent Families. Mrs. Pratt, who is an only child has been a popular member of the younger social contingent. She was graduated from Lovett's school and finished at Gunston Hall, in Washington.

The bride's mother is the former Miss Gladys Dunson, daughter of Mrs. Walker Dunson and the late Mr. Dunson, prominent residents of Atlanta. On her maternal side she is connected with the McCarty and Adams, her grandmother being the former Miss Willie McCarty. Her aunts are Mrs. W. B. Williamson Jr., Mrs. Straiton Hard, Mrs. William Bedell, of St. Petersburg, Fla., and Mrs. Burch Bland.

On her paternal side her grandparents are Kirk Smith Sr., and the late Mrs. Smith, of Ohio. Her grandmother was the former Miss Catherine Conklin, a member of pioneer prominent families of that state.

Mr. Pratt attended college at Emory at Oxford. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. John Pratt, of Lithuania. His father is from Aberdeen, Scotland, and his mother is the former Mrs. Ada Hamilton. He is a great-grandson of the late Judge Henry Pope Wooten, of Washington, Ga., and his brothers are James Pratt and Joseph Pratt, and he has one sister, Mrs. Frederick Gunn. Mr. Pratt now holds a responsible position with the Lucas-Jenkins interests.

Ida Jean Kain Says "Proper Reducing Diet Leaves You Radiant"

MY DAY

By Eleanor Roosevelt

Your Figure, Madame!
By IDA JEAN KAIN.

HYDE PARK—In this part of the world, the Fourth of July seems to have made up its mind to be cool. I remember that last year we had a picnic and I planned to have all cold food, and was severely taken to task because it was a cool day and everyone would have liked something hot to eat. Certainly the weather the last few days has had almost a touch of autumn in the morning air. I felt so encouraged that I decided to try riding in the lower woods, only to find that the flies and the mosquitoes swarmed about us. Rather than make the horses suffer, I turned around and cantered up the hill again and took to the open fields.

As you cross the main roads, you notice the number of cars which are out over a holiday, but in spite of that I see that fewer people have been killed in the first five months of this year than last year. This must mean that people are learning certain things about driving. The new rule in this state which is now in effect—that unless you are passing a car you must stay in the right lane of the road—will have a tendency to lessen accidents, I am sure.

In talking to Mr. Grover Whalen the other day, I remarked that I felt it was going to be a very great advantage to have the San Francisco fair, which stresses the beginnings of our civilization and culture in this country, open the same year as the New York fair, which will show what the world is like today and will suggest what we may look for tomorrow. I hope that many people who ordinarily go to Europe for the fair because of the interest these fairs will have. It may be very beneficial to all modes of transportation if they co-operate to work out round-trips at reasonable rates which will attract people who might ordinarily not be able to afford as comprehensive a trip about the country.

Of course, Mr. Whalen had to say that he must urge people who could not afford to see both fairs, to be sure to see the New York one. I imagine the head of the San Francisco fair would do the same, but for purposes of general education and pleasure I hope many people will manage to save enough money to see both fairs.

If one needed any proof that the teachers in the adult education program of the Works Progress Administration are interested in what they accomplish, the last report given out by Mr. Harry Hopkins makes this clear. In the face of economies which have cut the teacher's salaries and reduced the teaching staff, the total enrollment in the adult education classes reached 1,586,211, which is a few hundred over the number enrolled last year. To me, this program has always been extraordinarily important, because adult illiteracy tends to mean a lower standard of living and less parental control in the home. This is especially true where the parents are unable to talk and read and write in the language of the new country to which they have come.

TODAY'S CHARM TIP

A child's table manners tell much about the home background and training. But mothers must know the rules of etiquette themselves before they can train their young.

Barbara Bell Styles

SMART TAILORED DRESSES
COME IN TWO PIECES!

Two-piece tailored dresses are easy to tub and press, easy to pack, and both smart halves may be worn separately. Those are three practical reasons why a design like the one shown today is such a favorite with those who are vacation-bound. The third and most important reason is that it is extremely smart, and nothing looks so trim and suave and fresh for street wear.

This breezy little design has an unusually well-cut jacket-blouse with just enough front fullness, and side belts that accentuate the slim waist. In dazzling white sharkskin, linen, pique or that new rayon material that looks like thin, soft wool, this dress will be the joy of your life for all casual wear.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1483-B is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Corresponding bust measurements 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 (34) requires 2-7/8 yards of 36-inch material for the skirt; 2-3/8 yards for the jacket-blouse with short sleeves. Price of pattern 15 cents. Do not send stamps.

REDUCING DIET NO LONGER LEAVES YOU PALE AND WAN; IT LEAVES YOU RADIANT! "Doesn't Jane look perfectly awful since she has reduced?" That used to be the customary reaction when any of your friends took off weight. But how diets have changed! Nowadays, Jane looks positively radiant after reducing on menus that supply plenty of vitamins, minerals and protein.

Although these protective elements are always essential for the maintenance of a high level of vitality, they are strongly stressed on scientifically planned reducing menus that you are more apt to be consistent about having them every day. As a result, in spite of a cut in calories, you feel and look better because you have been taking the vitamins, minerals and protein in optimum amounts. Actually, you follow an abundant diet!

Numerous experiments have shown that by increasing a single dietary factor in an apparently adequate diet, the well being may be markedly enhanced, and the chances are that the scientifically reducing diet represents an increase in several of these nutritional factors. It is not surprising that the health improves on such a diet.

Nutritionists today favor a diet high in protein for the reducer. To enjoy greater vigor while reducing, include in your daily diet a liberal serving of lean meat, two eggs, one glass of skim milk or buttermilk and a serving of cottage cheese. Proteins are the strength-giving foods and any menu which fails to supply adequate amounts of good protein is unsafe.

Modern, scientifically-planned reducing diets give you an abundance of food.

The word "abundant" as applied to vitamins is ever so important. On a very limited calorie allowance you must almost literally follow the rule "no food without vitamins." Otherwise you will not get all the vitamins you need. If you are less than five feet three inches tall and on a 1,000 calorie maximum, these calories must all be in the form of the protective foods. To be supplied even adequately with the vitamins and minerals, you must take daily one-half glass of orange juice or one and one-half glasses of tomato juice, and a second fruit; two cooked vegetables, one a green; some raw vegetables; a minimum of one and one-half pats of butter, and three slices of whole grain bread. To this list you add lean meat, skim milk or cheese and eggs. By careful calculation you can get the optimum amounts of the protective foods in the 1,000 calories. Of course, there is no place on your menu for desserts or other nonessentials. The diet for the short person with low fuel requirements is practically limited to the protective foods. There is much more leeway in the choice of foods for the reducer entitled to 200 to 600 calories above the protective foods requirement.

Today's menu is an example of the diet abundant in the foods essential to health—and it is the type that keeps you radiantly healthy even though you are losing an average of two pounds per week.

FRIENDLY COUNSEL
By CAROLINE CHATFIELD

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondents invited. Your name held confidential. Write Miss Chatfield in care The Atlanta Constitution.

"There's no such thing as tact, anyone," said an indignant woman as she turned away from an encounter with one of these frank friends. "This miserable psychology has done it. Every woman you meet is delving into her own depths and delving into other people's depths and she's so pleased with her discoveries that she can't resist telling you about them, even if it makes a monkey of you. What do you suppose that creature said to me—that I had the reputation of being the cleverest woman in town because I never said what I thought. How does she know? Well, at least I did tell her what I thought of her."

"Nobody has any privacy these days. Talk and the microphone is applied to your words. Don't talk and they turn on the X-ray to see what's going on in your head. Laugh and they say it's out the wrong corner of your mouth. Fall to laugh and they say you have no sense of humor. Drop an innocent remark and get a lecture on the moxie. Make a joke and you are bored into with eyes that they accuse you of having got off a serious word under the guise of idle jest."

"Everybody is trying to find out if you are inferior or superior, normal or plain. Actually I feel like a patient in a laboratory every time I sit down to talk with people. I expect to be shown an enlarged picture of my brain, map of my glands, diagnoses of my diseases and prognosis of my thoughts. I'm sick of it!"

"There was a time when we could tell our friends what we wanted them to know and they didn't care. Beyond that point, but psychology has given them life and they explore the whole works and squeeze us for the last drop. Candid cameras are bad enough but these psychological hounds are terrible."

Trust a red hot gal to tell the truth and tell it straight. Anger pours enough adrenaline into her system to start her brain working fast and furiously and her tongue keeps time with it. If she's capable of an inspiration it comes to her then.

Inspired definition of tact: Respect for the other fellow's privacy. So one doesn't necessarily have to be kind to be tactful, but wise enough to keep the mouth shut when the ears and eyes are open.

Bridge Lite

By HAROLD SHARPSTEEN

THE ROAD UP.
Sooner or later, in the life of every ambitious bridge student, there comes an awakening when he realizes that to excel as a player he must master the job of counting. And he is ambitious he will master it.

Players who persist in sidestepping the issue will have to go on second-guessing their ways out of critical situations or be content to let their cards play themselves. While it is impossible to set up definite rules for counting down opponents' hands, most players, through proper concentration and practice, are able to master this accomplishment, generally conceded the most important single factor in bridge.

Counting is a matter of being able to place a 13-card suit as it was distributed in the deal around the table.

WHAT IS COUNTING?
By counting is meant ability to:

(1) Place a missing high card or cards with a definite opponent (can be placed).
(2) Determine how many cards of one particular suit each opponent holds (suit-placing).
(3) Accurately count the actual number of cards held by each opponent in all four suits (hand-placing).

WHY COUNT?
The purpose of counting is to aid declarer in determining in advance:

(1) In which direction to take a doubtful finesse.
(2) Whether a finesse or play to drop an outstanding high card.
(3) Whether to abandon the fi-

PLEASANT HOMES

By ELIZABETH M'RAE BOYKIN

REARRANGE THE FURNITURE.

What kind of a furniture mover are you?

Are you a furniture mover? Well, what lady is not! Every so often we all get the urge to see how that table will look over there by the big window or wouldn't it be better to have the sofa go anywhere but where it now is? And all grousing makes to the contrary, any home gets a definite lift when the lady of the house starts giving the furniture a lift from here to there (and sometimes back again).

Turn Your Sofa's Back.
Why not move furniture with a purpose in summer, providing you don't pick a ninety-in-the-shade day to do it. In winter the natural focal point for living room furniture is usually the fireplace or the bookcases; but how about forgetting them in summer? Turn your sofa's back rudely to the fireplace and put it in a window instead. If your living room has French doors opening on the porch, plan a grouping of furniture—two slip-covered chairs and a low table perhaps, facing the open doors. A wide bow-window invites another group for afternoon ice-cream drinking.

We have a friend (a furniture-mover if ever we knew one) who manages to change the entire atmosphere of her living room by a simple shift of furniture and a summer rug and a few slip covers. In winter a deep wine and blue, pale gray curtains, gray and blue furniture and copper lamps and accessories suggest long, snug evenings before the fire. But, come summer, the rug is rolled up, she adds a pale gray summer rug and slip covers the furniture in canary yellow and deep blue (the sofa blue with gray fringe).

Then she does such a magical job of shifting that winter is forgotten and the room announces "summer's here!"

She hides the fireplace itself with a low folding screen, made of red and painted yellow with a flamboyant oriental bird in full flight across its three panels. The sofa that usually faces the fireplace is turned at right angles and a bit away from it, facing French doors that look out on the side terrace. The slip-covered chairs are grouped near another pair of doors leading to the same terrace.

The heavier pieces in the room—a state, chest-on-chest and a Governor Winthrop desk of noble proportions—are set in the darker corners and some light frivolous summer chairs step out in odd places in the room, accompanied by little light-as-a-feather tables. Send a stamped self-addressed envelope to Miss Boykin, care The Atlanta Constitution, for our bulletin, "Recipes for New Wall Colors," if you're on the verge of a painting job.

HEALTH TALKS

By DR. WILLIAM BRADY

PHYSICAL EDUCATION, ATHLETICS AND SPORT.

Education is the act or process of training by a course of study or discipline. Physical education applies to the development of the body and the cultivation and preservation of health. Athletics means activity or skill in exercises, games or contests. Sport is amusement, diversion or pastime especially as a spectator or "fan."

After all, no system of exercises, setting-up drill or calisthenics performed solo or in a group or class under an instructor or drill-master can compare with a game played against a single opponent or as a member of a team against an opposing team, for its physical education value.

For years one fine high school required for graduation that the boy or girl candidate pass a rigid test in swimming and proficiency in rescue from drowning. That is what I call sound education. In another public school for years the principal staged private boxing matches or contests under proper supervision, and by such contests boys settled their differences or quarrels if any. The plan worked with great success until one yellow kid, a spoiled child, boo-hoed to his foolish parents, and they raised a scandal over the matter and succeeded in having the arrangement stopped. Just the same, in my judgment a growing boy who has not received fair training and opportunity to practice the art of self-defense under qualified instructors who are members of the school faculty, bona fide teachers, has not had a fair deal in education.

Parents too often acquiesce or actively conspire with their children in various dodges or cheats whereby the misguided young ones evade or escape part or all of the physical education the curriculum provides. A favorite fraud of this kind is sometimes aided even by the doctor who in his abject anxiety to hold the family patronage consents to help a girl to pretend a natural function is sickness, weakness or delicacy. This practice is a disgrace to intelligence. Doctors who participate in it should be exposed as shysters. Experience of thousands of young women of high school and college age has amply proved, beyond all eyebrow raising, that it is better for the health of the girl or woman that she continue all her usual activities, including regular exercise, be it athletic or gymnastic work, without interruption during the menstrual period. There is plenty of evidence, too, that pampering at that time, as though the function were a weakness or an illness, invites trouble. Any boy or girl, young man or young woman, who is able to be up and about should be required to take his or her regular physical training class-work as well as any other class-work. It is high time that our physical educators put an end to this abuse.

What Stocks Did.

NEW YORK, July 6.—Buyers pulled stocks out of an early decline and into a snappy comeback today.

The upturn converted losses running to more than 2 points in representative issues into gains of as much as 4 at the close.

While the market as a whole did little more than regain losses on the rally, some stocks rode the late buying wave to new highs for the June-July uptick.

Expanding on the rally, transactions totaled 1,694,840 yesterday.
